Her breathing soft and low,
As in her breast the wave of life,
Kept heaving to and fro.
So silently she seemed to sleep,
My very hopes belied my fears,
My fears my hopes belied—
I thought her dying when she slept,
And sleeping when she died.
But when the morn came dim and sad,
And chill with early showers,
My darling mother's eyelids closed—to wake
To a brighter morn than ours."

Sweet Jesus have mercy on her soul.

"A recent lawsuit, which showed a young and beautiful woman had been kept in a state of terror and almost poverty by a rascal who had possession of her letters—a sad case, which no honest man could read without blushing for his sex—has revealed to what depths human infamy can descend." The extortion of hush-money is the most cowardly and infamous of crimes, which the law, unfortunately, can rarely overtake and punish. "Extortion of hush-money," said an old Police Magistrate, "is a trade which supports at least a thousand scamps in London alone. Moreover, if we were to catch the villain in the very act, and hand him over to justice, the victim, in her fright at the chance of her secret being discovered, would turn against us."

THE PROTECTION and Political Reform League meets TUESDAY, 2nd November, Temperance Hall, 8 p.m. The attention of Protectionists throughout the country is called to the successful establishment by conference of 50 delegates on Wednesday last of a Supreme Council for Protection, embracing all leagues, farmers' unions, and trades organisations. The first resolution passed was,—"That the chief object of government, before any other taxation scheme at the ensuing session of Parliament, must be further protection through the Customs." 2. "That a monster public demonstration shall take place." This league therefore asks Protectionists not to fall into any trap for a dissolution or other side issue got up by the free trade "Parkes party," not game now to test the country on Protection v. Free Trade. No protection to farmers or permanent employment for starving workmen will ever be got from that miserable Parkes Opposition faction, hungering for office. The present Government are the first to give us an instalment of protection; stick to them for more. Hold fast to the standard motto, "Never change horses while crossing the stream."

THE CHURCH SOCIETY FOR THE DIOCESE OF SYDNEY.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The income of the Church Society (our home Mission) in 1885, though the largest yet received in one year, was less by £1000 than the sum required to comply with the Bishop's first appeal to double the income of 1883.
If that income is to be doubled during 1886 there must be a large increase in the number of subscribers, and the standard of giving at the collections in our churches must be raised.
At present the Society is assisting by stipend grants 56 parishes, or over one-half the total number in the diocese, and amongst other work it is helping may be mentioned:—
1. The erection and repair of Churches, Mission Rooms, and Parsonages.
2. The Mission to the Aborigines at Warangesda.
3. Mission work in the poorest and most populous parts of our metropolis.
4. Mission work amongst the Navvies and their families engaged on some of our Public Works.

HARD TIMES.
HARD TIMES.
Among the ANTIDOTES to "hard times" are BOOKS and STATIONERY.
With the former we drive away the gnawing worms of hardship, and with the latter we convey to our friends words of sympathy and expressions of fellow-feeling.
When money is "tight" and times are "hard," and everyone has to look twice at a shilling before he or she spends it, it is no small consideration to know the best and cheapest house whereat to buy. And—though we say it ourselves—
CYRUS E. FULLER and COMPANY
maintain that they sell both BOOKS and STATIONERY cheaper than any house in Australia; and as the proof of the pudding is in the eating, we invite every reader of these lines to do us the favour of paying our old establishment a visit, and proving the truth of our words to their advantage.

CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.

The value of this well-known Family Medicine has been largely tested in all parts of the world, and by all grades of society, for upwards of FIFTY YEARS. Purchasers are therefore requested carefully to observe the four following distinctive characteristics, without which none are genuine.

1. In every case the words JOHN STEEDMAN, Chemist, Walworth, Surrey, are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to EACH PACKET.

2. Each SINGE POWDER has directions for the dose, and the words "John Steedman, chemist, Walworth, Surrey," printed thereon.

The GREAT REMEDY of the NINETEENTH CENTURY for LIVER and KIDNEYS.

Prepared from Dandelion, and not a trace of mercury or minerals, simply culled from Dame Nature's garden, have now been taken successfully in the Colonies and India for the last 20 years, and are admitted by thousands to be the safest and only genuine pills for all that may be wrong with the Liver and Kidneys, with its inevitable consequences—Biliousness, Indigestion, Headache, Sickness, Shoulder Pains, Heartburn, Dizziness, Constipation, and Flatulence. Of all forms of medicine an aperient requires the greatest care, and the public should be satisfied that what they take is bona-fide, not simply a pill of indefinite composition; and, with our changeable climate, Abraham's Pills will at once suggest to patrons that they possess advantages over all the Pills and Potions that are constantly before them. For those suffering from Dyspepsia and the thousand tortures of a stomach out of order, whether the cause be cold, excess of eating or drinking, fatigue of body or mind, too active or sedentary life, Abraham's Pills, aperient and tonic, do not weaken, a result not hitherto obtained, a great importance in tropical climates. Increase in sale of Abraham's Pills has caused dangerous imitations. Be sure and ask for Abraham's Pills. Prepared at the Laboratory, 434, George-street, Sydney. Sold everywhere at 1s, 2s, and 5s.

DERMATOLOGY.

JAMES H. ADGER, Dermatologist. Office, 131, Elizabeth-street, Sydney, treats successfully all diseases of the skin and scalp, loss of hair, premature blanching, and general cultivation and growth of the hair; and, as a result of this experience, he may point to his flattering success during several years' practice in this city, without reference to the many special cures he has effected, as the best proof the general efficiency of his system of treatment.

Mr. Adger may be consulted at his office, 131, Elizabeth-street, where letters and testimonials are open to inspection, which must satisfy the most sceptical, signed as they are by persons of the highest positions in society. It will be obvious that no person could have obtained such names as an endorsement of his professional ability without constant proof of merit.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

DR. FORTESCUE'S PILLS.

DR. FORTESCUE'S PILLS, by their extraordinary purifying properties, carry away all those morbid humours which would otherwise become absorbed into the system and disease the various organs of the body. Being sugar-coated, they are easily taken by the most fastidious, without any of the nauseous feelings which so often occur in taking pills covered with objectionable powder. They are made solely from choice vegetable products without mercury or any of the many drastic purgatives, and blended by a patent process, so as to combine a soothing and tonic with cathartic action. Consequently, do not distress the system nor give cold, but fortify the digestive organs, stimulate the stomach and liver, assist the kidneys to work freely, and act gently but thoroughly upon the bowels without griping or any other annoyance.

DR. FORTESCUE'S PILLS

FOR FEMALES THESE PILLS

are invaluable, as they quickly remove all obstructions and irregularities, bring back the long-lost complexion, sharpen the blunted edge of appetite, and restore females of all ages to sound and robust health. These are facts and not fiction, as the experience of thousands unite in testifying that for constipation, biliousness, heartburn, wind, indigestion, dizziness, drowsiness, sick headache, impurities of the blood, rush of blood to the head, and disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels; and the best guarantee to the nervous and broken down in health is that have the largest sale of any medicine in Australia, being especially prepared for and adapted to the people's wants in this climate. Whilst is warranted to cure all sores, old wounds, burns, ulcers, and skin diseases.

No family should be without this famous household remedy. There is no salve to equal for speedily cooling and healing every conceivable description of sore, and the most obstinate wounds and ulcers succumb to its magic healing power.

Dr. Fortescue's Pills and Ointment are sold in 1s sizes only. (Registered under Trade Marks Act.)

The Perpetual Trustee, Executor, and Agency, Company, Limited, is being wound up, and it is proposed to take over its Business, Assets, and Liabilities at their full value as standing in the Company's books.

By virtue of this arrangement, New Shareholders will pay, and Old Shareholders be relieved of a portion of the expenses (about 6d per share) of inaugurating the former Company, and this is deemed to be an equitable provision.

The formation of this Company has been rendered necessary by the refusal of Parliament to pass the Bill submitted by the Perpetual Trustee, Executor, and Agency Company, Limited, on the grounds of the liability of the Shareholders being limited, and the capital insufficient; but it is believed that, with the largely increased capital, the difficulty will be overcome.

The experience gained by the Old Company since its formation has shown that there is a large amount of business to be done by a Company such as this.

The object of the Company is to establish a reliable, efficient, and permanent corporate body to act as Trustee, Executor, Administrator, Attorney, Receiver, Assignee, &c., in the management, administration, and realisation of Estates, and to transact Agency business coming within the scope of the Company's powers.

Every person who dies possessed of an estate, however small, must be succeeded by an administrator, executor, or trustee, whose duty it is to administer, manage, or realise that estate, in accordance with the provisions of the law or the expressed wishes of the deceased; and, during life, cases are of constant occurrence in which, from necessity or expediency, many would gladly avail themselves of the security and experience of such a Company.

Experience has proved that difficulties and risks attend the delegation of the charge of estates to individuals, and there is a widely spread and emphatically expressed desire that means should be provided whereby the present difficulty of securing the services of a trustee, executor, or attorney may be obviated, and guarantees for integrity and fidelity be obtainable.

The time and attention requisite for the performance of a trustee's duties involve a sacrifice on the part of individuals that few care to make; and the reluctance, therefore, felt in asking friends to act on the one hand, and the prudential reasons for refusal on the other, will be obviated by employing the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited.

The appointment of individuals as trustees, &c., is accompanied by the risk of their failure from refusal, death, incapacity, or absence, involving the appointment by the Court of others, at considerable expense to the estate. No such risk is possible with the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited, and even its substitution or assumption on the failure of the originally-named trustees, attorney, or agents, will ensure the continued administration of the estate.

Although every care may have been taken in the selection of administrators, trustees, or attorneys, a feeling of insecurity must exist in the absence of any efficient means for securing the integrity and fidelity of those to whom the control of estates has been delegated.

Despite the difficulties and disadvantages of delegating the control of estates to trustees, executors, attorneys, or others, no alternative mode for carrying into effect the wishes of a principal unable or unwilling to act himself seems possible; but it is believed the substitution for individuals of a corporate body such as the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited, would do much, if not all, that is practically necessary for removing the difficulties and obviating the disadvantages incident to the existing system.

The holders of offices of trust often find that they are, from various circumstances, without that control over the estates entrusted to their charge which they consider necessary for their own protection, and having no guarantee against the risks they have gratuitously undertaken, it is believed, would gladly avail of the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited, as a means to free themselves from an irksome responsibility, without injury to the trust.

The vast increase of property in the hands of the well-to-do working class, and the unsatisfactory way it is often managed, combined with the difficulty of getting suitable trustees, make the establishment of this Company a matter of great public importance.

In the case of Benevolent, Marriage, and other Trusts, Voluntary Liquidations, or where Landed Proprietors and others require to employ Attorneys, &c., the services of the Company will result in a great saving of trouble and expense, and secure an efficiency of management, combined with absolute privacy and security otherwise unattainable.

The charge for management will be moderate, and everyone will be able to learn on application the expense of administering an estate.

In all cases where the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited, is appointed, it or its officials so authorised, will act in the same manner and to the same effect as would individuals receiving the appointment; and if a testator who nominates the Company as his trustee or executor by his will or in any other way, has intimated a desire that any solicitor or firm of solicitors shall be employed by the Company, his desire will be carried out, unless from any cause the Company judge it inexpedient.

All moneys, investments, or loans belonging to estates under the management of the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited, will be kept separate from the funds of the Company.

Provision will be made to secure a thoroughly efficient system of Audits of all Trust Accounts under the administration of the Company.

It is intended to apply to Parliament for such powers as may be deemed advisable for the prosecution and development of the Company's business. Where, under the existing law, a Company cannot be appointed to any of the offices above specified, it is proposed that the Company shall grant bonds of caution or guarantee for any of the Company's Directors or officials who may be appointed.

The advantages of the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited, as an investment are quite exceptional. The expenses of management will be moderate, and, so far as practicable, in proportion to the business done. The greater portion of the paid-up capital will be invested in undoubted securities. The revenue must depend on the support accorded to the Company by the public; but even a small amount of business, added to the revenue from invested capital, will ensure a return to the Shareholders. Similar companies have been established at the Cape of Good Hope and in the United States, whose operations have been attended with great success, and the shares of which are standing at substantial premiums. In the case of the Trustees, Executors, and Agency Company, Limited, of Melbourne, the Company is paying a dividend of 10 per cent. and a bonus of 5 per cent., besides annually increasing the reserve fund, and its shares at present command about 200 per cent. premium. There is, therefore, reason to believe that this Company will be in every way successful.

Articles of Association have been registered, under which Shares will be allotted and business carried on.

Applications for Shares may be made to the Brokers of the Company.

Shares will be allotted in the order of application.

Share List will be closed on Saturday, the 30th day of October, 1886.

CHEAP GAS.

The
is now recognised as one of the most valuable inventions of the age, being in fact the very perfection of gas-lighting, and by its use a dull and wavering light is rendered INTENSELY BRIGHT and STEADY.

The advantage of using this light may be summed up as follows:—

INCREASED LIGHT,
COMFORT,
HEALTH,
DECREASED GAS BILLS,
SMOKE and FUMES,
HEAT.

The further advantages are that it can be applied to existing gasfittings, it SAVES its COST in three months' time, and the light is SOFT and STEADY to the eyes.

Needs but to be seen in operation to be appreciated.

GAS COOKING STOVES.

RALEIGH'S grand new Patent Gas Stove CARRINGTON.

IMPORTANT NOTICE to Persons Using Hired English Gas Cooking Stoves.—As there may be some persons who cannot understand how one ring on the "Carrington" Gas Stove not only does the work of four rings on the "Eureka" Stove, but will also roast a joint at the same time, the one ring on the "Carrington" consuming no more gas than one ring on the "Eureka," M. Raleigh will on Tuesday next take one ring out of the "Eureka" Gas Stove, at present in his workshop, and with this one ring placed in the "Carrington" not only boil water in four vessels, but roast a 10-lb. joint at the same time. If, after seeing this done, you will still persist in using the old extravagant style of Stove simply because you get it on such apparently rosy terms, I certainly say you deserve to pay for your disregard of facts, which you can see proved before your own eyes. Cooking days, Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 11 to 1 o'clock.

NEW ISSUE OF SHARES.

This Society has recently made great and rapid progress, as will be seen by the following extract from the last annual report and balance-sheet (June 30, 1886):—"The deposits have increased from £12,019 8s 7d on June 30, 1885, to £15,611 18s 5d on June 30, 1886; the amount of balances due by borrowers and land purchasers has increased in the same period from £26,688 18s 5d to £60,658 15s 1d, while the total receipts from all sources show the marvellous increase of upwards of £100,000 over the previous year. . . . . The balance to the credit of Profit and Loss Account of June 30th last was £10,784 18s. 4d. Out of this the directors carried the sum of £9473 to the Reserve Fund, which now stands at £10,000. The wonderful increase in the society's business, however, brought with it the necessity for an increase of the capital, which, when compared with the magnitude of the society's operations, was deemed to be too small. The authorised capital of the society is £50,000, in shares of £25 each, of which only £20,000 is subscribed for. The directors now consider it advisable to place upon the market the unsubscribed balance of the authorised capital, viz., £30,000, and upon terms which should ensure their being speedily taken up. The existing paid-up £25 shares have been sold in the open market at £32 10s each—that is, at a premium of £7 10s per share. In consideration, however, of the fact that it not intended to call up more than half the amount of the new shares at present, the board have decided to offer them at only £2 10s per share premium; but should it be necessary in the future to call up the balance, the purchasers will not be required to pay any additional premium. The new issue (which will be called Series No. 4) will receive the same rate of dividend as the paid-up shares, which for the year ending June 10, 1886, was 15 per cent. Subscribers to this new issue will also be allowed the privilege of depositing the amount required to make the shares fully paid up at 1 per cent. in advance of the highest current fixed deposit rate. That is to say, a person wishing to take up eight shares may, upon payment of the premium of £2 10s per share, pay the sum of £100 down, upon which he would receive, according to last year's rate of dividend 15 per cent. per annum; and the balance—viz., £100—he would be allowed to deposit, according to the current rates for fixed deposits, at 8 per cent. per annum. The total interest he would thus receive on his £200, plus the premium, would be £23, or a little over 10 per cent. per annum. But it is not compulsory for the whole of the £12 10s per share to be paid down at once. Upon payment of the premium of £2 10s per share as a deposit, an investor may secure the number of shares he wishes to take up, and pay the amount in calls of 5s per share per month, with the right to pay the whole of the £12 10s at any time."
Copies of last report and balance sheet, application forms for new shares, and all other information respecting the Society may be obtained on application at the office, 95, Market-street.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

ITALY.

XIV.

Excessive drinking is not the vice of Italy. In ancient times the laws regulating the use of wine were very stringent. At no table was it ever drunk unmixed with water; and for a woman to drink wine was a crime punishable by death. On the most crowded holidays, when the whole population of Rome turns out, and families or groups of friends resort to the numerous wine-shops either within or without the city, it is rare to see of an evening such a sight as an utterly drunken man. They are merry over their wine, and on three or four great summer and autumn holidays they sing loudly and make a great noise on the return home. Cases of stabbing are also frequent at these times, and lives are lost in hot blood. But the heavy taxes upon wine and spirits bar the working and poorer classes from habitual excess in liquor.

Wine is the liquor in most general use in Italy. The rich and the aristocratic classes resembling in their habits the same classes in other countries, there is no special remark to be made about them. For national customs one must look emphatically among the people, who are slow in adopting new fashions, and keep up longer the hereditary uses of their forefathers. Italians, then, still prefer wine to spirituous liquors. "A drop of good wine" is always the remedy for many ills of life, and can still be had, although it costs treble the price they used to pay for it 40 years ago—the remembered times when the good red wine of the Castelli Romani (fortified country towns on the Alban Hills) cost two bajocchi (two half-pence) a pint. In those days almost the only distilled spirit heard of was sambuco, made from elderberries. Alcoholic drinks are now frequent in North and Central Italy. Statistics from all parts of the Peninsula, carefully gathered and compared, result in the same conclusion, viz., that alcoholism—the tendency towards inebriating drinks, of whatever kind they may be—has not yet taken such alarming proportions in Italy, although tending to increase, as have long since obliged the Governments of other countries and the directing classes of society to adopt very various coercive measures and to exercise the widest propaganda for restraining intemperance.

In tracing out the causes of a like fortunate condition of things, it is desirable to consider, first of all, the temperate climate, which prevents the necessity, as in northern countries, for introducing the alcoholic fire into the human organism. It must also be remembered that there is a much larger number of the agricultural classes, who are by nature sober and almost patriarchal in habits, in comparison with the city and manufacturing populations, amongst whom alcoholism gathers the majority of victims. Finally, the widely extensive cultivation of the vine in Italy, and the fact that of all intoxicating liquors wine is indisputably the least pernicious to the human faculties are two points to be taken into consideration. Wine, then, is the intoxicating liquor most used in Italy, whilst the consumption of beer is very limited, other fermented liquors are unknown, and the consumption of spirituous liquors is also very small.

In Italy there are 1,926,832 hectares (hectare, measure of 100 acres) cultivated for vineyards, which give an average production of wine calculated at 27,500,000 hectolitres annually (hectolitre, 100 quarts). Now, when from the annual production the amount of exportation is subtracted and that of importation is added, the annual consumption of wine in the Peninsula is approximately stated. In the following table, the bottles for exportation and importation are calculated at the average capacity of a litre:—

Years.	Production.	Import.	Export.	Local consumption.
	Hectolitres.	Hectolitres.	Hectolitres.
1882 ..	26,500,327	60,745	1,331,849	25,229,223
1883 ..	28,437,000	46,681	2,629,060	25,854,621
1884 ..	14,146,300	115,788	2,381,253	11,880,835

To abstract from the deficiency of this last year, a deficiency partly made up by the reserves of the preceding years, partly by a greater quantity of inevitable adulterations, it may be said that to the already cited average production corresponds an average consumption little less than 25 millions of hectolitres, which, for a population of 29 millions, gives an individual average consumption of about 80 litres.

The only other fermented drink consumed in Italy besides wine is beer. But when it is noted that the national production scarcely amounts to 100,000 hectolitres, and is diminishing, and that the importation from abroad, which is increasing from the 42,000 hectolitres of 1877, has scarcely risen to 66,000 in 1882, and to 80,000, in round numbers, in 1884, it will be readily understood that no account is to be taken of the use of this beverage in Italy, or of its consequences upon the morality and temperance of the country. Not so much can be said as to the consumption of alcohols, however, for Italy may be behind other countries in that respect; but the tendency to increase, partly due to the rise in the price of wines, which become more and more articles of export, cannot fail to give cause for serious reflection to the Government; the more so, as in Italy, like France, the successive and very heavy increase of the duty has not availed to arrest the increased consumption.

The quantity of spirits drunk in Italy may be presumed from the following tables, which refer to anhydrous spirit:—

Years.	Local Production.	Import.	Total Consumption.
	Hectolitres.	Hectolitres.	Hectolitres.
1880 ..	139,362	128,597	267,956
1881 ..	218,632	61,643	280,275
1882 ..	206,987	83,179	290,167
1883 ..	226,542	148,278	374,820
1884 ..	202,153	26,088	228,241

Now, howsoever little the alternations of the last two years are taken into account, and which are due chiefly to the announcement of increased duty, and to the provisions made in consequence by the trade, it is certain that even the average of these last two years does not contradict the affirmation as to the increased alcoholic consumption. The following table shows the amount consumed by each individual:—

Years.	Alcohol Consumption for each Inhabitant.
1880	0·938
1881	1·005
1882	1·042
1883 } 1884 } average	1·079

This average is undoubtedly below that of nearly all other countries. In 1883 the average was three litres for each individual in England; three and a half in France; 4·60 in the German Stenerverein; about the same in Holland; 4·25 in Switzerland; 5·60 in Belgium. But whilst on one hand exists the tendency to increase, on the other the tables given are no basis for a comparison between the Italian and other peoples as to temperance and sobriety; since for this it would be necessary to add up the average amount of alcoholic poison absorbed by each and all of them in the form of wine, beer, cider, and other spirituous liquors—a calculation impossible to make without first proceeding to most difficult and abstruse investigations. It is a fact that in Italy, no less than in other countries, intoxication has produced and produces most deplorable effects.

The statistics of mortality do not extend over the entire kingdom. They furnish the data only for the 284 chief seats of provinces or districts, which in the census of 1881 give in the lump 7,073,601 inhabitants. The deaths from alcoholism were 336 in 1881, 295 in 1882, 322 in 1883, 298 in 1884. The accidental deaths caused by drunkenness were 35 in 1881, 24 in 1882, 19 in 1883, 14 in 1884.

The above tables represent solely the consumption of alcohol in the principal communes, in which, naturally, the greater affluence compared with the smaller communes, the larger number of retailers, the prevalent occupations of the population and their more frequent social meetings, favour the use of alcoholic drinks. This is why the average for Italy, as far as it has been obtained, is rather higher than that for the whole population of other countries, such as England and Sweden. Opposite results are obtained when they are compared with those of the principal centres of other States. Thus:—

DEATHS FROM CHRONIC INEBRIETY IN SOME STATES.

States.	Period of Observation.	Deaths in 100,000.
England	1880-82	4·3
Sweden	1880-82	3·4
Belgium	1880-82	7·7
Switzerland	1880-82	7·7
Massachusetts ..	1880-82	6·7
Connecticut	1880-82	7·1

And again:—

DEATHS FROM INEBRIETY IN SOME GROUPS OF CITIES.

Places of Observation.	Period of Observation.	Deaths in 100,000.
Italy (284 communes)	1881-84	4·7
Paris	1881	10·2
London	1881	7·0
Scotland (eight chief cities) ..	1881-83	8·3
Sweden (city communes) ..	1880-82	9·7
Denmark (ditto)	1880-82	27·4

But besides these figures, there are other elements to fill up the sad sum of intemperance. Among 289,666 individuals treated in 860 civic hospitals during the year 1883 (184,514 males and 105,152 females), 996 (911 males and 85 females) were affected with chronic inebriety, and 78 died (76 males and 2 females). Thus in a thousand hospital cases the proportions are from three to five from alcoholism; and let it be noticed that in this category only the chronic cases are comprised, not those in which the abuse of alcoholic drinks was the indirect cause of other maladies. And, besides this, in the lunatic asylums of Italy there were on the 31st December, 1882, 398 men and 48 women affected with delirium tremens, which figures rose at the end of 1883 respectively to 533 men and 49 women, in a total of 19,448 lunatics (10,121 males, 9327 females). So much for what regards the public health. For what regards public security, in 1881 the police arrested in the streets 8089 drunkards, and 9476 in 1882. Then in regard to the connection between the abuse of alcoholic drinks and criminality, in 1880 in 2983 cases of bloodguiltiness tried in the assize courts, 93 (that is, 3·15 per cent.) were attributed to drinking and debauchery; in 1881, in 2797, 119, or 4·25 per cent.; in 1882, 121, about the same percentage. And here the penal statistics come to a stop, those of 1882 having only been published at the end of last year.

Now, for eliminating or diminishing these dangerous consequences of intemperance, which, if not yet very alarming, are, still serious, what has been done, or what is proposed to be done, in Italy? It is painful to confess, that little or nothing has so far been done, or, it would seem, even contemplated. Neither do the public show any concern in the matter, or demand from Government the important measures which in some States of North America, in England, in Norway, and more recently in Holland, have produced an immediate and ever-increasing diminution in the consumption of alcoholic drinks.

Wine is only weighted with an octroi duty in the communes which the law declares close; that is to say, the duty is levied directly upon the articles introduced for consumption, while there is a small retail tax in the open communes. In the close communes, from which alone we can calculate, there is a Government duty varying from 3 francs 50 cents to 7 francs the hectolitre, according to the importance of the town; and a communal supertax not exceeding 50 per cent. of the Government duty. Now in 1883 the State received from food consumption in general 79,342,000 francs, and from special research it appears that about 44,000,000 francs were derived from alcoholic drinks. In the same year, in the balances of all the Italian communes, 101,420,109 francs were derived from the communal taxes, in addition to the Government duties in the close communes, and in the form of retail duty in the open communes; and it is fair to conclude that 25 millions of the above sum were derived from alcoholic drinks. In any case it is evident that there is no reason why the duty upon wine, between Government and communal duty, should not be increased beyond the ten and a half centimes the litre, and anhydrous alcohol eighteen centimes the litre. This would tend to restrain the abuse of alcoholic liquors; for, if the duty upon alcohol is only a slight addition to the tax which strikes at its production and importation, that upon wine represents the whole of the duty.

In Italy as in other countries the fiscal régime with regard to the production and importation of alcohols, has been continually varying in the sense of a surcharge of the tax. Previous to 1871 local production was exempt from duty, and the importation was taxed, according to the quality, at a sum varying from 5 francs 50 cents to 15 cents the hectolitre. In 1871 a tax was levied on national production at about 16 francs the hectolitre of anhydrous alcohol, and a corresponding duty fell upon imported alcohol. In 1874 the duties on production and importation rose to 30 francs the hectolitre. In 1876 foreign alcohols were taxed according to quality from 12 to 25 francs the hectolitre. In 1880 the tax increased to 60 francs the hectolitre. In 1883 it was further augmented to 100 francs the hectolitre, and a proposal is at present before Parliament for a fresh augmentation to 150 francs the hectolitre.

Certainly such augmentations are serious enough, but the limit is still far behind that of other States, where for every hectolitre of anhydrous alcohol there are the following taxes:—Great Britain, 478 francs; United States of America, 245 francs; Holland, 239 francs; Norway, 187 francs; France, 156·25 francs, exclusive of the retail and octroi duties; and we have to consider besides that the increased duties have been met by a continually increasing diminution in the price of alcohol, which has fallen from 150 to 43 francs the quintal. From these considerations it must be concluded that as regards public temperance there is small efficacy in the increased fiscal burdens upon alcohols in Italy.

Besides, the experience of various nations has already shown how inadequate are fiscal burdens in combating intemperance without combined action between the State, the communes, and private individuals. Taxes have had no influence in France, where, to an average consumption in the decade from 1830-1839 of 396,000 hectolitres, corresponded a consumption of 904,000 hectolitres in the decade 1860-1869; of 1,814,000 hectolitres in 1880; 1,420,000 in 1882; 1,484,000 in 1883; and 1,489,000 in 1884; and all this in spite of the duties having risen from 37 to 156 francs 15 cents per hectolitre. The exorbitant taxes in England had no influence on the trade until 1875, when a decrease in the consumption of alcohol commenced. This was due more than anything else to the active and efficacious action of the philanthropic societies organised to combat intemperance and alleviate the horrors of drunkenness, and to the temperance societies which had been working for years previously. In Norway, where the individual average consumption was nothing less than eight litres of alcohol, there has been a gradual diminution to 1·9, and this was due to the power granted to the communes to refuse concessions for the opening of retail spirit shops; so that there are now extensive tracts of territory where not one spirit shop is to be met with.

In Italy there is nothing like this. The law establishes the necessity for a license or permission to open a retail store to be granted by the political authority of the district; determines the duration of such permission for a year, to be renewed a month before the expiration of that time if the authority does not notify to the seller that a renewal is refused. The police authority, in accord with the municipality, fixes the hour for closing; it has the power to suspend the sale of liquors from one to eight days in case of riot or disorder; the police agents have the right of entrance at any hour whatsoever for visits of inspection; and they can, if they find occasion for it, clear the wineshops of the customers. The supervision of the police over the sale of alcoholic drinks is exercised with great indulgence, and the restrictive measures provided by the law are very much neglected. Thus, the retail shops, especially the lower class—the bettole, spaccio di vino, &c.—are kept open until past midnight. These are multiplied by means of provisory licenses, during the numerous public holidays, whether religious or civil, and it is on such days, and on Sundays especially, that the largest consumption of drink takes place. On the Sundays almost every shop is closed except the wine stores. No temperance societies exist, or if they exist nobody knows anything about them, and no good effects are perceived. Public opinion takes not the slightest heed of the increasing consumption of wine and spirits, and the continual increase in the number of wine shops, which amounted to 146,075 in 1874, 156,364 in 1878, and in 1884 167,472.

A commission of inquiry appointed in 1879 suggests the establishment in Italy of a general tax on the petty retailers of alcoholic drinks, with the view of restraining abuses, to improve health and morality, and bring some direct advantage to the public finances. The same commission drew up a project of law on the bettole (wine shops of the lowest order) and another for the repression of drunkenness; but the recommendations have not yet been adopted. From 1879 up to the present time the alarm sounded by this commission has been unheeded, and their proposals remain a dead letter.

A RIDE IN A TRAM.

By Jos.

Whether it was due to the weather or to the smart run, an odd feeling came over me as I made my way through the crowd at the Bridge-street tram terminus on Sunday last, and reached the platform just as the conductor's whistle gave the signal for departure.

"What street is this?" I dazedly asked of the driver—in my hurry I had stepped upon the engine. Day after day for years I must have caught the same tram to enable me to reach Bondi in time for dinner, but now the remembrance of all previous experience appeared blurred and indistinct.

"This is Birth-street," he answered methodically, "and you may think yourself lucky in being in time. Had you not come this trip you'd never have had another chance."

The man's manner and reply puzzled me. "Are the trams, then, about to be taken off this line?" I continued.

"No," he replied, in the same monotonous tone; "they will continue for countless ages. But look through the window down the long rows of seats and tell me what you see?" "All the occupants," I said in surprise, "appear to be babies." But this was not all; the nearest seats appeared low, rickety, and crowded. The materials were of the plainest, and the occupants ragged, hungry, and unkempt. The latter, indeed, seemed to have scarcely room to breathe; so that I was not surprised when told that, in proportion to their numbers, the mortality amongst them was far greater than amongst those occupying the higher and roomier seats at the back. From where I stood the seats seem to rise like those of a theatre when viewed from the orchestra. But there the analogy ceased, for, while in a theatre the best and most commodious places are in front, it was just the reverse in the carriage. As the distance and height of the seats increased the discomfort and meanness lessened until at last, at the very remotest and highest, the infants appeared warmly and expensively clad, while no efforts seemed to be spared to render them healthy and happy. While the huddled wee ones in front looked as if their struggle for existence commenced almost at the breast, the fortunate ones behind smiled, crowed, and bore the appearance of being cared for tenderly and well. "How is it," I said, "that the children do not all get a fair start; why is so much attention lavished on the few above while the crowd below have to shift for themselves almost from the very beginning. Would it not be possible to make them all equally comfortable by a more suitable plan of distribution, or is it essential that the rear ones should have too much room and care while those forward have too little?"

"My friend," answered the driver, "You have fairly hit on the head a question which has perplexed men ever since I commenced to travel this road many years ago. You can see for yourself that there is plenty of room if only a fairer plan of placing the little ones were adopted. However much they seem to differ from each other, they are all of the same family, and obtained their seats in precisely the same fashion. As we proceed on the journey and the children get bigger, you will notice that some of those now on the high, roomy and comfortable seats behind will descend by degrees till they reach the crowded and mean ones in front, their places being filled by those now struggling for space in the latter. There is a constant passing to and fro, but in driblets only, the general rule being that most of those who remain to the end retain the same places throughout. But why the great bulk are handicapped from the beginning, while the others have everything in their favour, is more than I can tell you. I have heard it said that these journeys are only trial trips, and that in the real tour, which commences as soon as this is finished—the excursion which I am told is to last for ever—the passengers will take their places not according to the seats they held during this jaunt, but according to the way they conducted themselves en route. If such is the case, many of those now in want of room will be rewarded for their patience and cheerfulness, while I fear some that occupied the best seats in my caravan, and frowned upon those who would climb up and sit beside them, will be forced to hang on behind. This seems the most reasonable solution of the difficult question you've 'sprung' upon me. If it is not the correct one—if in the great approaching expedition seats are to go by chance the same as in this—then the best thing the crowded passengers could do when they grew big and strong, would be to clamber up the high seats, and throw the occupants out if they objected."

"You mentioned," I continued, "those who remain to the end. Are not all the children bound for Bondi? Do you intend setting any of them down on the road?"

He looked thoughtful. "You will see as we go along," he answered enigmatically, "all my passengers by every trip are booked for the same destination. You can call it Bondi if you wish; I have another name for it. It is seldom, however, that any of them remain with me to the end. There are so many stopping-places—some seductive, others forbidding—on the road that I generally reach the terminus alone. That people, especially young ones, should desire to loiter at pleasant stations you will readily understand. Why they should dismount and remain at unattractive ones you will learn as the journey proceeds."

Slackened speed suggested a stopping-place, and the tram coming to a standstill, I saw the name "Dentition-lane" on a board over the way. Looking into the car, I noticed that, although no noise proceeded from the occupants, they were all crying with pain. Men, mostly in black, approached the open doors and windows from the footpath, and reaching through, carried off the children who seemed to suffer most. "You will wait, I suppose," said I to the driver, "until the little ones are brought back. They have scarcely begun their journey." "Those who pull through," he remarked, "can join me further on. Many of them will travel this line no more, but will shortly take their berths for that eternal voyage we spoke of. Although I am so used to such sights I always feel sorry when fares leave me so young. Whatever is in store for them in the other world, they certainly have not fulfilled their mission in this. There surely must be another world where the blinding tears poured out so profusely and unavailingly over the tiny dead are dried, and the heart of Rachael gladdens at the sight of her lost children. Ah, if they would only let old mother nature have her way, and make those fellows in black—the doctors—keep their hands off, nearly all the little ones would come on board again at the next station." Feelings of pity and of levity were oddly blended in this strange driver.

Again the tram started and before long drew up at "Scarlatnia-crossing." On looking through the window I saw that the children had grown considerably since the beginning of the journey. They were now able to sing and romp, but the partitions between the high and the low seats, which at the beginning looked fragile and elastic, had now become higher, stronger, and stouter. Even for some time after leaving Dentition-lane, the noisy wee things would climb over the barriers or creep through them to play with those above or below. But, before "Scarlatina-crossing" was reached, whether from the increased heights of the barricades or the constantly developing class spirit, it was rare to see a well-dressed child among the poorly clad crowd in front, or a meanly dressed one among the richly habited occupants of the higher seats. Although no word reached me from the inside, there was no mistaking the gestures and postures of these saucy little lady marionnettes en papillotes, or mannikin gallants in jackets. The amplest vocabulary could say no plainer, "We are of porcelain; those below of the commonest delf. If we would not be used roughly they must be kept in their places." But if the occupants of each compartment were anxious to keep those below from intruding, they seemed even more anxious to intrude themselves upon those above them. Thus, from the bottom to the top, none seemed content with the places assigned to them at the start, but divided their time between struggling to ascend themselves, or telling those in the crowded seats how wicked it was not to be content with their lot. The barrier between the top seat of all and the one just below it appeared higher and stronger than any of the others, so that although some of those behind it occasionally got over and mingled with the others, it was very rarely that any of the latter got through it and retained their newly-acquired elevation. The occupants of this loftiest place were few in number, and being unable to ascend higher, spent most of their time strengthening the partition separating them from the crowd below. Turning to the driver, I asked, "why is it that the last barrier of all is so much stouter and higher than the others; do any ever climb it and reach the top?"

"Not many now-a-days," he replied, "and those that do are seldom welcomed by the few behind. They are looked upon as upstarts, and are much more liable than the others to be pulled back again, not unfrequently hurting themselves in the descent. That seat is reserved for monarchs, and neither wisdom nor prudence entitles any of the other passengers to go up and sit amongst them. You observe that the portion of the barrier in front of each seat is distinguished by the name of the country—such as England, Germany, Russia, &c., whose ruler sits behind. From where you stand the barrier appears of equal strength all through, but such is far from being the case. That portion labelled "England," is the stanchest and stoutest of all. For over one hundred and forty years no effort has been made to cross it from below. It was a young Scotchman who tried last. He got one leg over, but owing to his want of support, and the pluck of the little German who held the seat, he was forced back, badly torn by the spikes on top. Nearly a hundred years before he tried and failed, a number of dissatisfied people called "Roundheads," resembling somewhat those to be found in the ranks of the Salvation Army of to-day, forced their way from the bottom, breaking through all the partitions till they came to the last, behind which was the young man's great-grandfather. With this they had some trouble, as it was very stout in those days, but at last it gave way. Then they seized the brave defender and chopped off his head. Forty years afterwards another mob, this time from the higher seats, made such a noise outside the railings that the lad's grandfather fearing they would give way deserted his post, and took lodgings with his nearest neighbour. But, as I said, for nearly a century and a half nobody has tried to get through that portion of the fence, so that now it is believed to be the stanchest section of all. In that next seat, where the little French lad sits, you see the barricade has been entirely removed. But it has been set up and pulled down so often since it was first broken through, nearly a hundred years ago, that I would not be surprised at any moment to see a number of the sprightly little fellows now bowing and grimacing send their wee red caps through the window and start to erect it again. If they should do so there will be a tremendous row among them to pick out some one to place behind it. Ah me, how the time goes! I remember well when first they broke it down. They smashed it so thoroughly that nobody dreamt it would ever be rebuilt. The dirty, frowsy, struggling lads and lasses at the bottom made a rush for the top, upsetting everything in their way. From behind the last enclosure they took the ruler, his wife, and his sister, and beheaded them. Then they picked out a number of those in the top seats and made them to sneeze into the basket. And so, ever since, that portion of the partition has been up one day and down the next, until it was a wonder how any person could be found to sit behind it at all. It has been down longer this time than at any former period, so that many think no further effort will be made to rebuild it. But signs are not wanting to show that an endeavour may be made any day. You will probably notice that the section of the barrier marked "Russia" appears the strongest of all. But this is in seeming only, for the mischievous children this side of it have lately acquired an unpleasant habit of throwing crackers over it, thus keeping those behind in a constant state of alarm. One day it is probable that a larger squib than usual will not only injure those in the rear, but level the partition itself. The American section, you observe, has no partition at the top, and very few throughout.

At "Scarlatinacrossing," a number alighted, while many of those left at "Dentition-lane" again took their places in the tram. "Measles-mews" and "Diphtheria-road" were quickly passed. At the former nearly half the passengers got out, but almost all got on board again at the first opportunity. "Diphtheria-road" was a narrow ill-looking place which the driver told me had a very bad repute. Few of those who wandered far down it ever found their way back. Fortunately it was a narrow and uninviting that few ventured into it at all. It was at one time hoped the driver said that it would be closed up altogether, but there seems to be some powerful interest at work, and so it remains open. Shortly afterwards "Typhoid-turning" was reached. It was much wider than I imagined, and quite a number of fares stopped at it. "I noticed," I remarked, "that the first passenger for 'Typhoid-street' usually came from the dirtiest and most crowded corners of the tram, but that on leaving they beckon to others sometimes occupying the cleanest parts, and the latter rise and follow them as if they could not help it." "Yes," he replied, "every tram that starts on this trip has a number of those close, evil smelling comers; and, as you saw, it was from those that the people usually started for this thoroughfare. There is no doubt that half the stopping places on this road might be done away with but for the vested interests at work. Trams are constantly sent overcrowded from 'Birth-street' while comfort and cleanliness are seldom adequately provided for on the road. It is the opinion of those who ought to know that 'Typhoid-turning' might be closed up altogether, or at least so reduced in breadth that few would care to get down and explore it. Yet every journey I take I find it just as wide as ever, and see some of the best-behaved passengers turn down it."

At "Smallpox-siding" and "Cholera court" the pace slackened, but, as none of the travellers showed a desire to alight, the speed was again increased. At neither place was there anything but a weather-stained board to indicate that it was a halting place at all. "Ah," remarked the driver sententiously, "that is how it should be with 'Diptheria-road' and 'Typhoid-turning' if things were as they should be. I mind the time when I was driving at home that those stations 'Cholera' and 'Smallpox' were the worst on the line. At the latter especially, long before your grandfather was born—I am much older than I look—it would break your heart to see the number of smart lads and bouncing lasses that dismounted at that dreadful place. In the few broken-down and disfigured men and women that hobbled back you would never recognise the fresh and blooming youngsters that left me a short time before. And that 'Cholera-court!' I've seen piled there as thick as bricks in a kiln those who a little previously were full of life and hope. It will be a black day for Australia when either of these thoroughfares is widened. I remember when every third person you met was hideously disfigured with variola. Now, even in places where it once committed such ravages there are few so scarred. Yet, after an experience extending over generations, you find people passionately denying the efficacy of the means by which so much suffering, disfigurement, and death were averted."

We had now arrived at what I imagined to be the bottom of the Paddington hill. So far our journey had been an ascending one, but the steepest gradient was just in front. From the top of the hill we were about to climb stretched a table-land reaching almost to Bondi. "The elevation in front," said the driver, "is 'Manhood-ridge.' Many of the passengers get out here, and whether they rejoice in good or bad health farther on, or whether they come up with us again, depends a good deal on the turnings they will take. Look, and tell me what you see."

Just then the tram stopped, and, as one in a dream, I gazed upon the ravishing prospect. There was life everywhere—life young, careless, and buoyant. We appeared to be the centre of a circle, whose radii were long streets, avenues, and boulevards, down which we could look by merely turning our heads. "Love Avenue," "Business Mall," "Glory Boulevard," "Dissipation Highway," "Law Place," and many other names appeared in large letters at the entrance of each thoroughfare. As I looked at the passengers alighting I noticed they had grown into youths and maidens just on the boundary-line of manhood and womanhood. "I see," said I to the driver, who stood close beside me, "that nearly all turn their steps instinctively to 'Love Avenue,' which for some distance is indescribably charming. On either side are fine trees, with gaily-plumaged birds flitting incessantly from branch to branch. Borne on the breeze come snatches of song and ripples of light-hearted laughter. Some way down a great arch spans the roadway, and while many of the young people join hands and pass joyously under it, others look up apparently at some word which appears upon it, but which I cannot read from this, pause, look back, and ultimately retrace their steps without going beneath the arch. Beyond it the street seems to narrow, the trees are not so thick, the houses are more sombre in aspect, and the people who pursue their way do so with a staid and sober pace."

"The arch you see," said my companion, "is called Matrimony." Comparatively few pass under it at the first trial. They laugh and sing and dance along till, looking up, they spell the dreaded word and pause. In the distance they see those who preceded them, notice that their surroundings are not so joyous, their endearments so demonstrative, or their progress so void of care as before, and so hesitate and draw back. But there are many other causes that make people careful of diving under the curve. A young couple are sometimes on the point of passing under, when looking sharply round the youth discovers his companion in the act of making signals to some other youth not far behind. Happy for him if the discovery is made before the final step is taken. Again, it is not unusual for the maiden having approached the arch with one person to dart suddenly beneath it with another, who had followed her closely all the time. Some go through, but after a short experience of the other side desert their companions, and by entering and following a right-of-way called "Mendacity," manage to appear again in the main avenue on this side of the sign. This is considered a grievous wrong to the person so forsaken, but as a rule the latter console themselves by either doubling back themselves, and reappearing on this side, for the purpose of securing another partner for the journey, or else by picking up with someone by the way, and agreeing to travel in company. Few of those who enter 'Love Avenue' together pass hand-in-hand beneath the arch. They nearly all change partners by the way. But turn your gaze on some of the other thoroughfares, and tell me what you see."

Although so much light and gaiety appeared at one end of the avenue, yet the other end seemed so shaded and sombre that I obeyed without reluctance. The aspect of "Glory Boulevard" puzzled me—the appearance was so out of keeping with the high-sounding name. Narrow, mean, and tortuous it looked. Some distance down a few middle aged men were pursuing their way in a listless, half-hearted manner, but few of the young ventured into it. "Yes," ventured the driver, anticipating my wish for information, "it sometimes makes me smile when I remember the kind of thoroughfare it is in other lands. In most other nations it is the principal highway of all, and down it all the young men are obliged to pass. From daylight to dark there is nothing to be seen in it but waving banners, gaily-caparisoned horsemen, and compact masses of men pressing eagerly forward, nothing to be heard but the blare of brazen instruments, the sullen rumble of artillery, and the hoarse shouts of command. Many good men supposed that as the years went by it would gradually narrow until at last it would entirely disappear, leaving behind but a memory of man's former inhumanity to his brother. So far as appearances go, however, its width in the world's chief countries is increasing instead of diminishing, so that now all other promenades are of small account compared with it. With us it is still narrow and uninviting, but there is no knowing the day when it will require to be widened if we would hold our own. At the beginning of last year it was temporarily enlarged to allow of the passage of a small number of hastily armed and awkward men who appeared anxious to help in settling a dispute with which they had little concern. Fortunately nothing came of it, so the street contracted again to its former humble dimensions. Some there be who would place a board proclaiming 'No thoroughfare' across the entrance, but it is doubtful whether it would be quite safe to dispense with it altogether."

I now turned to Dissipation Highway. The entrance to this was the most ravishing and seductive of all. In the crowd surging towards its opening I recognised many of those who had turned back in Love Avenue on reaching Matrimony Arch. Tinkling of pianos, jingling of glasses, and bursts of boisterous laughter came from the open windows, from many of which tempting women leant to banter badinage with the passers-by, and invite them to enter. In the first few houses on either side mild alcoholic drinks only, such as small beer and light wines, could be obtained. Further down spirits were to be had, further still absinthe, and, towards the end, opium.

"Ah," said the driver sadly, "the number of the best, and bravest, and brightest I've seen swallowed up in that cursed street! A few, you observe, turn back before reaching the end, but they are seldom the same again. The worst of it is that everyone thinks he can retrace his steps when he likes; but if you look closely you will see that while the road in front of them is level and pleasant it becomes broken up and difficult behind, so that each step forward makes retreat the harder."

"Do any ever escape from Opium Alley at the bottom," I asked.

"A man occasionally," he replied, "a woman never."

While pondering on what I saw and heard, I did not notice that the tram had already started, and was almost at the top of Manhood Ridge. On the level we bowled along at a great rate, stopping every now and then to pick up those who had dismounted at previous stations. Many who had escaped from Dissipation Highway came on board, but they looked old and brokendown compared with the others. The best preserved and most contented of all who rejoined us appeared to be those who passed down Love Avenue at first, and dived unhesitatingly under Matrimony Arch. But whether this was due to greater care on the road or to some toughness of constitution which defied wear and tear, it was impossible to say. At Consumption Corner and Rheumatism Loop a few alighted, mostly from those who had escaped from Dissipation Highway. Looking into the car I noticed that more than two-thirds of those who came on board at Birth-street were missing, and that the remainder were middle-aged men and women, who sat silent and reserved in their seats, seldom endeavouring to reach higher ones. Few stations were met before the descent towards Bondi, when they again became frequent. At each one some feeble old people would get down and quickly disappear in the approaching gloom. At length the roar of the ocean warned me that the terminus was almost reached. On again looking through the window I saw that but two passengers were left. One was dressed in a tattered red swallow-tailed coat, and had a wooden leg. A silver medal marked "Waterloo, 1815" was on his breast. The other had a long queue, a three-cornered hat, a patch over one eye, and a cork arm with a dangerous looking hook fixed in it. A silver medal with "Trafalgar, 1805" was pinned over his heart. I had previously noticed that these persons appeared to monopolise a good deal of the conversation, and to make themselves disagreeable in many ways—chiefly, it seemed, by telling personal anecdotes which their fellow-passengers heard with obvious incredulity. On looking to the driver for an explanation he remarked with some asperity, "On every tram that has come this way for years, some of these troublesome fellows are to be found. Even when the terminus is reached I have to go and pull them out, and they are unsparing in their abuse when I won't let them begin the journey over again. You see what trouble I'll have with them." Sure enough, when the tram reached Bondi the driver had to alight to persuade those two old persons to leave. They received his well-meant remonstrances with unseemly vindictiveness, the military wreck charging him with his wooden leg, while the mariner unscrewed his arm, and flourished it in dangerous proximity to the driver's head. At last, force had to be used when the pair left arm-in-arm, piping in shrill discordance, "Britons never shall be slaves."

It was now my turn. The driver, hitherto so affable, approached, and said politely, but firmly, "You, too, sir, must get down." Before me stretched the illimitable ocean. Its roar was in my ears. A small boat was in waiting, with a lamp labelled "Hope," swung from the sprit, but still I hesitated. I dreaded the deepening gloom—the waves' wash frightened me. I begged to be allowed to begin the journey afresh.

But the driver was imperative and menacing. "Only one of the children of men," he said, "was suffered to start on the eternal journey without breaking the trial trip." He seized me, I struggled and—a moment afterward a chill blast from the south warned me that the sun was dipping behind the Blue Mountains, while from a Neutral Bay rock I lay idly regarding the passing ships in the harbour, and the dusk gathering over Paddington and Woollahra.

ENGLISH GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, SEPT. 17.

Wonderful weather. Crowds coming and going. Parliament still sitting, sorely against its will. Mr. Parnell holding it, not with his eagle eye, but with his obstructive bill. Lord Iddesleigh, in attendance at Balmoral, has to return suddenly for a Cabinet Council. The question paramount at the moment is not Ireland, but Bulgaria. Austria is beginning to put out feelers for a rapprochement with this country. The Triple Alliance is said to be not an alliance, but only an agreement on certain lines. It may be broken up at any moment if Austria finds her position compromised by the advance of Russia. There is war in the air. The Czar is credited with pacific intentions. Behind him is the great Pan-slavist movement which may push him onwards towards Constantinople against his will. According to the tone of the money market, which of course is an excellent barometer, peace is considered certain. In diplomatic circles the opposite view holds. The great banking houses of the Continent have possibly something to say in the matter. Berlin holds Russian stocks in enormous quantities. War would shake their values down to a minimum. Berlin has tried over and over again to unload on the London market; but without success. Peace is not only the policy of Bismarck, but the necessity of bankers and investors. On the other hand there are warlike forces at work which may sweep down every necessity of civilisation and every obstacle that even Bismarck may lay in their path. The general feeling in London is pessimistic, and it is reported that to-day the Admiralty have ordered 30 first-class fast steamers to be held in readiness at the dockyards for the service of the Government.

In the meantime, as I said before, the weather is lovely all over the land. The London streets are full of sunshine. Harvest operations are going on everywhere under satisfactory circumstances. While thousands of Londoners have left, and continue to leave the great metropolis for the sea, the mountain, and the moor, as many seem to pour in from the provinces, to enjoy their vacation in London; and many attractions are provided for them, apart from the "Colonies." The Lyceum Theatre is once more open. "Faust" renews its early success. Most of the scenery has been touched up, some of it repainted.

Two important theatrical events are to take place at the Princess's Theatre during Mr. Wilson Barrett's absence in America. The first is the production of a new melodrama by Mr. H. Hamilton on Saturday night, under the management of Mr. Hawtrey, who has made a fortune out of "The Private Secretary." Mr. Beerbohm Tree was offered his selection of the two leading men's parts, but, after reading the play and considering its prospects, he declined the offer of an engagement as a principal in the cast. The materials do not promise much, but the dramatic story, I am told, is well written, and is to be very carefully and picturesquely mounted. Mr. Arthur Dacre, Mr. Hawtrey, Mr. Brandon Thomas, Miss Amy Roselle, and Miss Carlotta Addison are in the cast, which is an unusually strong one. If the success of the piece can be insured by the acting of it, "Harvest" should run to good business until Mr. Charles Warner is ready to step into the management at Christmas, when the second venture to which I have referred will be launched. This is a melodrama written by Mr. Jones, who seems to be gradually coming to the front as one of our most prominent dramatists.

Mr. Wyndham has been very ill, but is now recovering. His theatre, the Criterion, is at present closed, and he is living in his new and pretty home on the Thames, adjacent to Pope's Villa, where Mr. Labouchere resides during the summer, except when he is recruiting on the Continent. He has not made much of a mark lately in the House of Commons. In the run of his encounters with Lord Randolph Churchill it is generally acknowledged he has come off second best. There is one thing required, even in a Parliamentary career, and that is earnestness. Mr. Labouchere does not possess that quality. Life to him is more or less of a game. He plays it as much for amusement as for profit. He is a professed cynic, a pleasant companion, an excellent host; but he is not an earnest politician.

The theatrical sensation of the moment is Mrs. Conover's production of "Macbeth" at the Olympic Theatre. Mrs. Conover is a wealthy amateur. She has spent and wasted over £30,000, it is said, at this theatre.

Literature is said not to be very flourishing. This is the report of the publishers. They mention curious examples in point. Some of the new shilling books have fallen utterly flat, and the summer numbers of the Illustrated London News and the Graphic have had the smallest sale in the history of such productions at Smith's bookstalls. Nevertheless, the publishing houses are vigorously preparing for the coming season. In this respect Christmas numbers already cast their shadows before. Harper's and the Century are in tremendous rivalry. The proprietors of the latter magazine have withdrawn it from Warne and Co., and consigned its English fortunes to the new house of Fisher Unwin. At the end of the year, or in January, they will have a new Anglo-American serial in Scribner's Magazine. The Century, as you know, was originally Scribner's. When the partnership in it broke up Scribners refused to allow their name to be associated with the magazine beyond a certain date. Hence the change from Scribner's Magazine to the Century; hence, also, the new magazine under the old title, to be published by the old firm. The Christmas number of the English Illustrated Magazine will contain a poem by Meredith. The English Illustrated, published by Macmillan, and the Magazine of Art, published by Cassells, are the only rivals of the American magazines. The English Illustrated is somewhat handicapped in price. It is certainly the best sixpenny worth in or out of England or America.

Among Sampson, Low, and Marston's books, "American Yachts," by Frederick Cozzens, is very appropriate at the moment when America has secured her second great victory against England. The text of the work is by Gerald Kelly, Lieutenant in the United States Navy, an officer of wide experience and established reputation. The pictures are by Cozzens, whose marine works are most favourably known. The tendency of the day to publish books of an extremely inexpensive or extremely expensive character is developed in this new work on yachts, a proof copy of which is to be 20 guineas, an artist's proof copy 30 guineas. We are promised an attractive artistic work in a personal memoir of Caldecott, by Henry Blackburn. Another important work which we are promised in the next season is to be four volumes, Imperial octavo, entitled "Celebrated Racehorses of the Past and Present Centuries," with portraits, the latter being, of course, the leading feature. The pictures will be arranged in strictly chronological order, commencing in 1702 and ending in 1870. The letterpress will deal with the respective pedigrees and performances of each horse, and the price is to be, to subscribers, £1 11s. 6d., afterwards £2 2s. per volume. Landscape art is to be represented in the publications of the coming season by a book entitled "Life and Landscape on the Norfolk Broads." Sampson, Low, and Co. promise in October a new novel by Joseph Hatton, entitled "The Old House at Sandwich." Among books of travel, "Three Thousand Miles through Brazil," by James W. Wells, is well spoken of, as throwing a new and clear light upon the geographical and physical features of an immense line of country in Brazil, the result of experience gained not only by the travels themselves, but also from an exceptional acquaintance with Brazil, probably such as few foreigners can show.

Either the Queen is losing some of the firm grip on affairs she once possessed, or she has enemies among her entourage who send vicious gossip to the society papers. It is known that her Majesty has taken a personal interest in the welfare of Prince Alexander; but this week she is reported as bent on having him come on a visit to England, that she may make a show of sympathy in his favour, as a hostile demonstration against the Czar. Truth states, with some show of knowledge, that Ministers have had to use their influence with the Queen to prevent this. I question, however, if Truth has not greatly exaggerated her Majesty's action in the matter, though she has certainly invited nearly all the members of the Battenberg family on a visit to Balmoral. The Prince of Wales is said not to feel as affectionately towards the Battenbergs as her Majesty, but the Queen is touchingly devoted to the Princess Beatrice, and is proving to her husband a most kind and generous mother-in-law.

"Ay, marry now, unmuzzle your wisdom."—Rosalind.

Considered as a Cabinet review of the session, in 25 paragraphs, contributed in a scrappy pro rata fashion by all the Ministers and their Representative in the Legislative Council, assembled in solemn conclave, the "Governor's speech" was interesting. It was interesting, too, for the quality of the vice-regal prose. Some people aver that the Under-Secretaries are responsible for the Governor's speeches at the opening and closing of Parliament; that they concoct the sentences to be delivered by his Excellency; and that the Premier does little else than pin them together in their proper order, and slip in that little regulation allusion specially addressed to the "Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly," and of course always accepted by them as an ample return for all their birth-pangs over Revenue, Loan, and Appropriation Acts. The repetition of such phrases as "it is gratifying," "it affords me great gratification," "it would be gratifying," and the expression of such a promise as this most shockingly hackneyed and as shockingly violated one, "the sums voted will be disbursed with a due regard to economy"—smack, no doubt, of the official red tape, but the evidence of Ministerial handiwork in nearly every sentence of this Speech is too strong to be rebutted. So also is the negative evidence afforded by some masterly omissions. The singularly cool references to our huge deficit and to our miserably shrunken revenue from Crown lands could hardly have been produced by an official; nor would he have been likely to describe the defeat of the Land Tax Bill and the abandonment of the Income Tax Bill by saying that "the various proposals of the Government for the purpose of supplementing the revenue have not all received the assent of the Legislature." The author of such a really artistic euphemism as that should be able to boast no common training in the sophistical art. Then, what Civil servant would be likely to put the word "eventuate" into a Governor's speech? The right to take liberties with her Majesty's English is the special privilege of the responsible advisers of her Majesty's representative. Lastly, whatever be the shortcomings of public officials, let us at least nourish a hope that no official pen could perpetrate such a verbal hoax as this:—"Although the estimated receipts from the various sources in connection with the administration of the lands of the colony have not been fully realised by reason of the unavoidable delay which took place in bringing into operation the revenue-producing clauses of the Land Act of 1884, it is to be remembered that on the completion of the appraisement of the whole of the pastoral lands of the colony the revenues which are still uncollected for 1886 will be received in the early months of next year."

"Revenue-producing clauses" is good, particularly good. "Revenue destroying" would not have been so good, for the truth is not always the right thing to tell. But the sententious inconsequence is positively delicious. The logical inference would have been harsh, and it is perhaps a consolation to know that the pastoral rents for 1886 have not been spent because—because—well because they have not been received. Any other reason to be thankful I have not detected.

It is not very difficult to pick out of this speech the contributions of the Colonial Treasurer and the Minister for Public Works. Here and there a paragraph is suggestive of the Colonial Secretary. The Minister for Mines and the Postmaster-General are each visibly incarnate in complacent references to matters emanating from their respective departments. Dr. Mackellar has been allotted a little corner to say a word or two for the Dairies Act. If the Minister of Justice has had a finger in the pie, it has been only his little finger. But the Law Minister and the Education Minister seem not to have been allowed to touch the pie even with the tips of their little fingers, though Mr. Want may have added the declaration of prorogation which crowns the queerest valedictory ever rehearsed by an Australian Governor. For the things left out of the speech are more significant than those left in it. Ministers have not told us how they managed to develop its chef d'œuvre the deficit—to dodge retrenchment and the New Hebrides question—to make the railway pot a "boil over"—to manage that outrageous "revoke" in the "tariff" rubber—to muddle the centenary celebrations so that from the depths of public contempt they never can emerge. Neither have they told us whether they are serious over the new Land Bill which has taken them so long to addle. But the oddest omission in the speech is—rabbits. What can the Minister of Mines have been thinking about, and where was the "Big Brother?" Yes, surveying these 25 paragraphs, I have only one image present to my mind's eye—that of a sea-pie made by a scratch cook in very tempestuous weather, out of the contents of the ship's stock-pot—with no flavouring in it—the crust sodden dough—the meat tepid, unsavoury, and now and then tainted; the gravy luke-warm cabbage water. Of course Ministers stuck the regulation prayer in at the end by way of grace after meat. But the reader will be ready with another—and a much more appropriate one. And is it not—

"But, oh, for the touch of a vanish'd hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still!"

For some time I have been thinking that we are all wanting to grow rich too quickly, or if not all, as many of us as are in the way of gathering up the precious metals. Men and women are not in that way when they happen to be in gaol or an asylum, nor are persons in Government employment; but with these, and a few other exceptions, it seems as if we were all entered for a general scramble for money. This is why men study the nominations for big races, and then have dreams. When awake, they proceed to back the particular quadruped dreamed of, if possible, for some double event. That double does not come off, or, perhaps, I ought to say, does not "eventuate." The dreamers lose their money, but repeat the process as soon as convenient, and indeed sometimes sooner. Others rush to Kimberley or Teetulpa as they rushed to the Turon, Kiandra, or Ballarat, when fresh and hearty gold maniacs, Consule Planco, ever so long ago. Others rush into imports and exports, speculate madly in shares, buy up scrubby old grants with shady titles, and subdivide to the earth hungry; and in a score of other ways make huge bids to Fortune, staking life, honour, and happiness on the off chance of something or other turning up trumps. And then others, thinking themselves more cunning than their fellows, or being, in fact, more reckless, strip for the scramble crying "Devil take the hindmost," which often means themselves. These are the plungers who become infamous about the new "fraudery;" whose number in 1886 gives one the idea of a general eruption of rascality—or of an epidemic of embezzlement, malignant, wide-spread, smiting down its victims among the tallest and the soundest. Of course collective morality prosecutes. Sacerdos improves the occasion. His passionate appeals occupy columns in the Monday journals. If Parliament happens to be in session, half a dozen politicians smother the Government with moral interrogatories and become famous. Finally, the jury is empanelled to listen to a pair of hundred-guinea casuists in silk. The Judge sums up straight at the jury's consciences; and they, poor fellows, remembering that outside the Court the guiding motto for every man-jack of us is Rem-quocunque modo-rem—agree to disagree. No locking-up can make them budge. They are discharged after the customary attempt, and the Judge calls on the next case. And what are our comments next morning? "Poor devil"—or it may be, "Rich devil"—"he must have made some mistake about the 'modo.' 'Quocunque,' he ought to have known, means 'provided you are not found out.' 'Rem,' properly pursued, is, of course, 'the whole duty of man.'"

Here is a choice example of style, picked at random from the amending Land Bill:—

"7. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in section 52 of the principal Act the holders of conditional leases under that section who may have resided not less than five years and are now residing or being now resident shall complete that period of residence upon the conditional purchases in right of which the preleases were originally granted or upon their conditional leases derived from such pre-emptive leases shall have similar privileges as regards preferent right of purchase or extension of the term of lease as are conferred by section 50 of the principal Act."

When we have expressed our laws in this kind of language, we have to get them interpreted for us. The process of interpretation is neither rapid nor cheap. When sundry judges and the necessary complement of counsel have thrashed the matter out to their satisfaction here, we go home to the Privy Council to find out which guess has most nearly hit the mark. And then we get a decision upon which we can found other actions at our convenience.

What a beautiful thing sympathy is; and how affecting Mr. Dibbs can be when he adds to it a noble generosity. Hear him! "When it was represented to the Government that there was distress, the Government put their hands into (there should have been a pause here for dramatic reasons)—the public revenue in order to provide work for these people, and therefore they could not be chargedd with having no sympathy with the working classes in the hardships they were enduring." This is carrying altruism rather far. The relief of distress is no doubt one of the highest of all pleasures; but that form of self-denial which deprives itself of this delight, and forcibly transfers it to other people by putting its hands in their pockets, is apt to be wrongly interpreted. There is some hope, however, that we shall soon see the last of the difficulty, for Sir Patrick Jennings, with that comprehensive breadth of phrase which sometimes distinguishes his utterances, told the deputation that the Government were trying to find "an immediate solution of the difficulty." There is one aspect of Tuesday's proceedings which is not at all agreeable. Mr. Dibbs knew, or ought to have known, the state of the case before he received the deputation. If there was any duty cast upon him to provide for the unemployed, it should not have been necessary for 1500 men to march down to his office to point it out. The whole thing looks so much like an attempt to intimidate the authorities that it is to be wished that the Colonial Secretary had insisted upon their marching away again before he undertook the consideration of their grievances. Mass meetings may be regarded in two aspects—the one of moral, the other of physical force. The decision of the London police authorities to prevent the proposed Socialist Demonstration on Lord Mayor's Day is one of very doubtful wisdom, and is more suggestive of Continental than of English methods. If the Englishman is allowed to "demonstrate," he generally does it peaceably, recent experiences notwithstanding. It would be far better to allow full freedom of expression to the Socialist feeling of the country, and to provide against any danger of riot or breach of the law. If the country be not with the Socialists, they will not be able to do very much; and if they have its sympathy, it is hopeless to endeavour to suppress them. As it is, they will be enabled to pose as martyrs to the cause of freedom; and the cause of freedom has seemed to justify many a crime.

THE PRAYER BOOK DEBATE IN THE SYNOD.

The introduction by a Bishop of the Church of England of such a resolution as the one that was debated in the Synod last night is a sign of the times, and the debate which followed will certainly mark an epoch in the history of the Church in Australia. It is not too much to say that Christians of all denominations are interested in the question, for though divisions have often caused controversy, and sometimes rivalry, there is Christianity enough in all sections of the Church to lead them to desire each other peace and prosperity. Probably the wise and liberal remarks of the President on the subject in his opening address helped to prepare the way for what must be characterised as a very interesting and temperate discussion. The speakers seemed to have weighed well the fact that they were touching that which belonged to a large part of the Church universal; and that though the Synod might claim and exercise powers far beyond the resolution, it behoved them to respect the sentiment of continuity stretching back over so many centuries, and the sentiment of unity lying behind the uniformity of the common sort, and holding together a large and world-wide communion, notwithstanding the great varieties of thought amongst its most active members. The mover of the resolution was thoroughly outspoken; but, possibly through speaking rather as an independent critic than with the reluctance of a candid friend, he seemed to fail in carrying the sympathies of any large part of his audience. In justification of his position he quoted very strong utterances by English bishops and other leading churchmen in favour of revision, and argued that, seeing the present edition was the result of a fourth revision, it was no slighting of the work of the last revisers to assume that after 224 years of development in the Church she should require, and be competent to make, improvements. The objections to the book in its present form were its rigidity, reiteration, and redundancy in some respects, and defectiveness in others. Probably a stronger case has seldom been presented by any critic from outside the Church. He dealt purely with the objections usually taken as to the difficulty of carrying out satisfactory revision because of the State relationship of the parent Church and other hindrances, and as to the danger of commencing a work which might be carried further than the promoters intended. In speaking of the advantages of careful revision, he argued that the only alternative was such evasion and in fact disobedience by the clergy, which in England had led to painful cases of discipline and even persecution before the civil courts. He was very careful to emphasise the fact that his resolution guarded against any meddling with the doctrinal parts of the book. As to the danger of such a matter being coldly received by the English Parliament if brought before it by Convocation, he thought even if it helped to hasten disestablishment the freedom of the Church would more than compensate for such a loss. At an early stage in the discussion an amendment was submitted omitting all reference to revision, and substituting the addition of an appendix to the book providing forms of prayer for missions and other special occasions. The most effective speech on the other side was made by the venerable Dean of Melbourne, who lifted the discussion into a region where mere criticism was forgotten. The whole synod seemed to feel a prophet's power as he pleaded for the integrity of the book because of its associations and the part it had in cultivating and maintaining the unity of the Anglican Church in all lands and through generation after generation.

As far as the actual attitude of the Church could be gauged by the discussion, the probability is that an abstract question as to there being room for improvement both as to the service and the rubrics would be pretty generally affirmed; but that when the possible dangers are placed against the advantages of revision, the advocates of change would be in a minority. Very little seemed to be made of any hindrance arising from the relationship with the parent Church in her limitations of legislation, because of establishment. Possibly the president's remarks, directing attention to the possibility of the parent Church, leaving each branch free in the matter, had influenced the speakers in this respect. It may be said that arguments such as the Dean of Melbourne used may carry a synod away from the real issue, and leave all the difficulties untouched; but, certainly, he laid his finger on the real secret of the organic unity of the Anglican communion, and much more than he had time to advance might be said in its favour. True, men must be honest and loyally fulfil the conditions of the service they enter. And there are circumstances when an honest man must give up a position taken in all good faith. If he discovers that his position requires him to do what his conscience disapproves, he must retire from it. The mover of the resolution and several other speakers affirmed strongly that the Prayer Book required many things which numbers of clergymen could not do. This is a matter for the conscience of those concerned. But due weight should be given to the answer to this: That, as a matter of fact, these difficulties were magnified and unduly pressed, and that where by tacit consent of ecclesiastical authorities certain services were at certain times shortened or modified, it was not honesty, but unfair magnifying of non-essentials, to insist that those who broke the letter of the law should resign or advocate revision of the Prayer Book.

A very strong point urged by the supporters of the resolution was that the Church in Ireland and the Church in America, immediately upon their separation from the parent Church, carried out a revision of the Prayer Book. As far as the vote has gone, the Church of England in Australia seems unlikely to follow their example.

THE JENOLAN CAVES.

XVI.

From "Lot's Wife" to "The Crystal Cities" is about 20 yards north, through a hall from 9 to 15 feet high. On the right-hand side is a concrete wall, which rises about 12 inches from the floor, to protect the "Cities" from dust raised by the tramping of feet. At the end of this concrete wall is a descent of two steps, which brings visitors in full view of the exquisitely beautiful cave, in which there is a group of dazzling Lilliputian cities, whose buildings are of crystallised lime. The streets appear to be thronged with minute figures,

"——no bigger than an agate stone
On the forefinger of an alderman."

The sight recalls the Man Mountain and the wonderful Land of Lilliput, upon which Lemuel Gulliver was cast, where cavalry exercised on the palm of his hand, and infantry marched 24 abreast between his legs, which were stretched out like those of a colossus. Imagination can supply the Palace of Belfaborac in the metropolis of Lilliput, surrounded by myriads of tiny statuettes, representing the kingdom in which raged no less than six rebellions, excited by an imperial degree that eggs should be broken only at the smaller end, whereas it had been from time immemorial an article of faith that they should be broken only at the larger end, and notwithstanding that their book of faith and morals required only that all true believers should break their eggs at the "convenient end." There is no evidence in these crystal cities, however, of any rival factions corresponding to the "Big-endians" and the "Little-endians" of Lilliput. The figures are crowded together like masses of people before a hustings or at a cricket match, and the effect is passing strange. They have been formed by water which has been retained for a time in natural basins and then gradually percolated through the floor, possibly to enter into the composition of crystal cities in other sparkling caves. In this respect they resemble the basins previously described. The crystallization formed in still water, or in water which moves only downwards, passing slowly through the floor as through a dripstone, is always characterised by extreme delicacy and elaboration. The contrast between the "Lot's Wife" crypt and this is as great as the distinction between Asphaltites and the Garden of Eden; between Gustave Doré's illustrations of Purgatory and Paradise; between Milton's L'Allegro and his Il Penseroso; between the Pink and White Terraces which until recently were the delight of New Zealand tourists, and the eruptive mask of scoria which now covers their charms.

In this remarkable cave several distinctive features are presented. The central horizontal line is well defined by an overhanging ledge, from which hang some splendid stalactites. Several of them are of extraordinarily large size, elegant form, and delicate colour. One, of pure white, on the left-hand side of the cave, rests on the head of a sturdy stalagmite which has grown from the middle of a mass of rocks, sloping down to the base. A little to the right are two twin stalactites, caricatures of the stretched out scraggy legs of some very-long-cold-and-hungry man, and the most prominent central figures of the ledge are two conical pieces tapering off to fine points, like mammoth icicles. Above this ledge the formation of lime on the dark rugged wall and roof resembles fleecy clouds in an angry sky. Below, running back into the mountain, are "The Crystal Cities," fenced in with corrugated sparkling walls coped with shell-formation. A little beyond is another wall of a similar kind, also gracefully curved in obedience to natural laws, for nature loves curves and wages perpetual war against straight lines. In the distance are five or six other mural divisions. The central one is gracefully bent like the letter S, but not quite so much rounded at the ends. Between the outer wall and the rest is an open pear-shaped space, in which are four small domes and two conspicuous figures. The principal of these is "The Queen's Statue," a pleasing stalagmitic form of pure alabaster, about 20 inches in height, and standing on a pedestal of white, shading off to brown. It does not require much imaginative power to see in this image a representation of some royal personage clad in ermine robes. The proportions are good, and the pose is exceedingly graceful. Near to the Queen's Statue is another notable stalagmitic object, formed in three sections, indicating periods of rest between. First there is a foundation of white limestone formation. Then there is a columnar growth of a few inches, with a distinct joint between it and the base. Super-posed is a dome-shaped summit, not unlike the back of a human head of that kind which phrenologists call "intellectual;" and between this and the lower portion is another well-defined joint at the nape of the neck. It is peculiar, but not regal, in appearance. The topographical aspect of "The Crystal Cities" is something like that presented by a "bird's-eye view" of a piece of country, in which everything is much foreshortened, as in the case of the Katoomba Colliery and mining township in the depths of the Kunimbla valley, when seen from a cliff 1000 feet overhead. Giant eucalypti are dwarfed to the proportions of pot plants. Tall tree ferns resemble starfish. Stalwart workmen are reduced to pigmies, and the railway seems like the double line at the foot of an account in a ledger. The various walls in the cave are supposed to encompass separate cities. The old English idea of a "city" is an incorporated place, with a cathedral and a bishop. In America all incorporated towns with a mayor and aldermen are spoken of as cities. But modern cities are not walled like those in the caves. The latter accord more with ancient cities which were intramural. For "cities" are ancient. Cain built one. Walled cities were numerous in the land of Canaan. But from the Cities of the Plain to the apocalyptic city of gold, with foundations garnished with all manner of precious stones, it would be difficult to imagine anything more brilliant and sparkling than the crystal cities of the Jenolan Caves.

Passing from the Crystal Cities to "the Showroom," about 20 yards north, several charming features present themselves for admiration, among which are conspicuous a glittering cascade, terraces of warm brown colour, reticulated; and also a pure white, delicately made shawl hanging from the roof. The height of the crypta is about four feet, and its breadth 12 feet. The floor is mitred at the side, and between the shell borders are little forests of figures. Some elegant Doric shafts extend from the floor to the roof, which is adorned by many sparkling stalactites. The Showroom itself is a marvel of beauty. Its name indicates that it is a place of splendid exhibits, and it is appropriate. The cavern is 12 feet high, 12 feet wide, and about 40 yards long. Some of its principal features are remarkable for their elegance, and the most striking figure is distinguished by classic grace. It is a stalactite of purest white, 7 or 8 feet long, and from a little distance seems as smooth and round as though it had been turned in a lathe. It tapers very gradually, and its termination, which is thickened a little, rests on a stalagmite equally symmetrical, but formed in sections, each layer—of which there are about a dozen—indicating separate periods of formation and times of rest. This peculiar stalagmite rests on a dome marked by similar lights and shades. It is the centre of many varieties of cave ornamentation. For the most part the stalagmites are dumpy and poor, but there are numerous shelving platforms hung round with gorgeous stalactites, and above them are pieces of intricate formation, both floral and coral, of different classes of excellence. There are magic haunts and silent chambers with coruscations like twinkling stars on a "moon-deserted night." Nature has cast over the whole of this cave a spell of exquisite beauty.

Near to the Showroom is the cave of "The Grand Stalactites." It is only about 10 feet by 13 feet, but its massive grandeur is so impressive that the pleasure it produces is "akin to pain." Some of the stalagmites are enormous. Their summit is lost in the masses of huge stalactites which depend from the roof, and they rest on beautiful brown terraces and mounds, covered with scintillating reticulation. The elephantine stalagmites, like the stalactites which hang between and about them, and in several instances descend nearly to their base, are of dazzling whiteness. The massive pillars are so close together that the intervening spaces look like pillars of jet, and thus we have "buttress and buttress alternately framed of ebon and ivory." The majesty of this cave haunts you. When the magnesium lamp is extinguished and thick darkness once more casts its veil over the magnificent scene, the vision of beauty dwells in the mind like a memory which stirs the depths of the soul.

GENERAL SYNOD OF AUSTRALIA AND TASMANIA.

FOURTH DAY.

Yesterday afternoon the General Synod of the dioceses in Australia and Tasmania resumed its sitting in the Chapter House.

The PRIMATE, as president, read prayers.

THE ARCHBISHOPRIC.

The Bishop of ADELAIDE moved, without notice,—"That the name of the Bishop of Ballarat be placed on the committee appointed yesterday in connection with the creation of the archbishopric, in lieu of Mr. Hawker, resigned."

The motion was agreed to.

ECCLESIASTICAL DISABILITIES.

The Rev. Canon SELWYN moved,—"That the following be the select committee appointed on the subject of any ecclesiastical disabilities which may attach to clergy ordained in the colonies, or clergy in England ordained for the colonies:—The Lord Bishop of Goulburn, the Lord Bishop of Newcastle, Canon Handfield, Archdeacon Stretch, Rev. F. T. Whitington, Archdeacon Beamish, Rev. C. G. Robinson, Rev. J. D. Langley, Rev. F. D. Bode, Archdeacon Campbell, Archdeacon Marryat, Archdeacon Pownall, and the mover (Canon Selwyn), and that they be requested to report to the synod at a later period of the session."

The Rev. F. D. BODE seconded the motion, which was agreed to.

ALTERATION OF DETERMINATION II.

The Bishop of BALLARAT resumed the debate in the following motion, which had been moved by the Rev. Canon Green on the previous day:—"That a select committee be appointed to take into consideration the desirability of amending Determination II., session 1881, so as to bring it into greater harmony with ancient precedent, and canon law." If there was a desire to refer the matter to the Bench of Bishops, he would be prepared to support the motion, otherwise be opposed it.

The Rev. C. F. GARNSEY said that in 1881 he did not agree, and he saw less reason every day for agreeing with such a motion. He agreed with the Bishop of Ballarat that the question of doctrine should be submitted to the Bench of Bishops.

The Rev. F. D. BODE considered that the very idea of a bishop of the Church of God having any charge preferred against him was most serious, if there were one. The Catholic Church had never granted to a single individual the right to bring a charge against his bishop. He was not, however, disposed to object to the appointment of the committee.

Mr. W. TARLETON said he did not think any cause had been shown why this matter should be referred to a select committee. He should, therefore, oppose the motion.

The Rev. Canon CHALMERS supported the motion.

Mr. THOMAS ROBERTSON contended that was not the proper time to consider this matter. The ordinance as it stands was a wise and true one, and if a bishop preached heresy the other bishops would deal with him. He should oppose the motion.

The Rev. Canon WHITE thought that if a bishop preached heresy it would be a very difficult matter for a brother bishop to bring the charge. The persons who would know the doctrines preached by a bishop would be his own presbyters, and they were, he thought, the proper persons to bring any charge against him. He agreed that it would be very undesirable to let three chancellors say whether the case should go forward, because, though very good lawyers, they did not understand theology. It had been shown that there was some need for reconsideration of the recommendation, and he should therefore support the motion.

Archdeacon STRETCH said the object of appointing this committee was to do away with the board to try bishops, and he thought they ought all to oppose the rejection of the committee.

Archdeacon FARR supported the amendment, on the ground that some one else than the bishops should bring forward any charge.

The Hon. G. H. COX suggested that any one member should have the right to consult with other members as to amendments, which should then be printed and circulated amongst members.

The Dean of MELBOURNE contended it was not necessary that a jury should be learned in the intricacies of the law. Nothing be more injurious to any class of men than immunity from accusation, and it was the best security when men had to act in the light of day. He supported the motion.

The Rev. Canon HANDFIELD said he could not consent to the appointment of the committee.

The Rev. Canon GREEN having replied,

The motion was carried.

THE REVIVAL OF SUB-ORDERS.

The Rev. F. S. POOLE moved,—"That this Synod is of opinion that increased agency is required to enable the Church to reach all classes of the community, and respectfully requests the bishops to consider whether by an extension of the diaconate, or by the revival of what are known as the 'sub-orders' this agency may not be created." Their Church had not to a very large extent kept touch with the population. Taking South Australia for example, he found that only about 25,000 out of some 300,000 returned themselves on the last census as belonging to the Church of England. Sittings were provided in their churches for 21,500 persons, and 7600 of these seats were absolutely let, and very few churches in South Australia were absolutely free. There were only 9000 Sunday School children in South Australia. In that colony only about 24,000 persons were held by anything like a tie to the Church, and something like 50,000 were untouched by any influences of religion. There was only one more clergyman in Adelaide now than twenty-five years ago. One of the influences against which the Church had to fight was the growth of secularism, and the widespread spirit of propagandism of its doctrines. He thought that some of the evils of which he spoke might be met by an extension of the "diaconate." He thought they should do something by way of reaching the masses, and of breaking down social distinctions in the Church, where no distinctions ought to be made.

The Rev. Canon GREEN seconded the motion.

The Dean of MELBOURNE said this matter appeared to him to be one of the very highest importance. He did not conceive that they could improve any of those things which belonged to the essence of the Church of England. The Church had made great progress during the past century. The time had not passed forty years since it was held by many that the only thing the laity had to do was to suffer persecution for the truth, and to find money for the ministers. Now, throughout England the clergy were calling the laity into a degree of exertion, and now that the laity had been called on to work, the Church of England had been a wonder to herself. Why? Because the laity had been given to feel that they were part and parcel of the Church. He hoped the Church would not depart from the three ancient orders—bishops, priests, and deacons. He did believe in the sacerdotal character of the Church of England, but not of the ministers. They had men of the very highest position in society, going forward as licensed readers; and if they accepted this motion it would be like saying that these people had no right to orders, but were to be given a lower sort of order. He earnestly prayed the synod to consider well before they attempted to do this work, and asked them not to change the existing orders of the Church.

The Archdeacon of CUMBERLAND thought they were indebted to the mover of the resolution, for he was convinced that in every diocese there were numbers of persons lost to the Church of England and to religion. There was an enormous population in Sydney alone who never entered the church. If the diaconate was not to be introduced some other means might be adopted to meet the growing evils. In some parishes in this diocese a great deal of good was being done by means of the "Church Army." His recommendation was, not the extension of the diaconate but the creation of the Church Army.

The Bishop of GOULBURN said that the scheme of diaconates had been a failure elsewhere, and he did not think it would answer here. Some such scheme as had been proposed would, he thought, be beneficial, by calling into operation the efforts of godly laymen.

The DEAN OF HOBART felt that the extension of lay agency would not supply what was required, namely, the intervening link between the clergy and the laity who would be formed by the appointment of the diaconates.

Archdeacon JULIUS said that what they really wanted was men of the people, not cut off from the people, but in full sympathy with them, and living up to the Gospel of Christ. If the Church could lay hold of such men, give them its sanction, and send them amongst the people, he believed the Church would find the advantage of it. He very earnestly supported the motion.

Archdeacon DAWES said that what they wanted was to rouse the people in their churches, and let them feel that to them belonged in part the priesthood of God, and that they must labour to win back the masses to God. He thought they ought to establish parochial missions.

The Rev. F. T. WHITINGTON moved the adjournment of the debate.

The PRESIDENT, before putting the motion, said he thought the House ought to know what had been done elsewhere with reference to this very matter. The House of Convocation of York, on April 22, 1884, passed the following resolution:—"That this House is of opinion that, in view of the overwhelming need of increase in the number of the ministry, and the importance of providing sufficient endowments for the purpose, it is expedient to ordain to the office of deacon men possessing other means of living, who are willing to aid the clergy gratuitously, provided that they be tried and examined according to the preface of the Ordinal, and in particular be found to possess a competent knowledge of the Holy Scripture, of the Book of Common Prayer, and of theology in general; provided also that they be in no case admitted to the priesthood unless they can pass all the examinations which are required in the case of other candidates for that office, and that they shall have devoted their whole time to spiritual labour for no less than four years, unless they are graduates before they present themselves for these examinations."

The motion for the adjournment of the debate was then agreed to.

REVISION OF THE PRAYER BOOK.

The Bishop of BALLARAT moved,—"That this synod is of opinion that the Prayer Book of the Church of England stands urgently in need of such revision as will augment its flexibility, variety, and comprehensiveness, without introducing any doctrinal changes, and respectfully submits this expression of its opinion to the authorities of the Church in England, earnestly hoping that they may, in their wisdom, see fit to originate early action in this matter." The speaker said the resolution which stood in his name was brought forward by him five years ago. The Prayer Book, in his opinion required some revision. He did not propose that they (the Synod) should attempt to revise the Book of Common Prayer, but they could make certain representations to the authorities to the effect that a revision was desirable. The Prayer Book had been in use for over 200 years, and they ought to know something of its merits and defects. It was a wondrously and incalculably valuable book to all of them, and he yielded to nobody in the synod in his profound admiration of the chaste language of that volume. He did not rise to attack the book; on the contrary he loved and revered it too much to attack it; but he did say that the book was open to revision. It had been revised four times already, and it would be quite reasonable to have it revised again. The moment the American Church got free from the Act of Uniformity it betook itself to the work of revising the Prayer Book; and the great Church of Ireland, as soon as it was freed from the Act, followed the same course. He then quoted extensively from the remarks which have been made on the subject of the revision of the Book of Common Prayer, by the Bishop of Winchester, the Bishop of Bedford, the Bishop of Norwich, and other learned men of all schools of thought, the whole of whom were decidedly in favour of some alteration of the book. He also said that Lord Nelson had stated that some of the services in the book were not at all suited to many members of the Church, and did not meet the requirements of the great mass of the people. Having used the Prayer Book incessantly for years, and formed an opinion regarding its merits and defects, the rev. gentleman said that a deliberate conviction had been formed in his mind that nothing other than a renewed baptism of power from the Holy Ghost were more important to the life and prosperity of the Church than the revision of the book. He then alluded to the rigidity in style and direction, and the lack of variety which characterised the volume. In his opinion it was, in many respects, somewhat monotonous. He did not think the great bulk of their people took spontaneously to the rigid style of the Prayer Book, and there was an outcry for shorter services. The effect of the rigidity of style in the book was ultimately to bring about disobedience. At the present time he did not believe that the rubrics were obeyed strictly. As a matter of fact, only half the burial service was used in Australia. (Cries of "Oh, oh!") Well, he was very glad to be corrected, and he would withdraw the remark. He had been told that the Church of Rome provided greater liberty of action for the clergy, and the clergymen of the English Church must either go to Rome or dissent, or violate their declaration if they wanted greater freedom. He preferred to agitate for the lawful authority to get certain improvements brought about in the book which was so dear to all of them. He then dealt with the objections which might be raised against the revision. There would, he said, be no danger from a proper revision of the work as long as the alterations did not involve any doctrinal changes. It was marvellous to him to find the people of a Reformed Church protesting against the revision of the Book of Common Prayer. The revision of the work was not impossible, and they must have it revised either with the consent of the English Parliament or without it. If they could not get a reform in their liturgy, then let them be free and let them be disestablished. One advantage of passing the resolution would be that the question of the revision would be brought under the notice of the great authorities in England. The subject would then be properly considered by the Lambeth Conference, and he thought that the result of the consideration would be to further the cause of the Church of England.

Archdeacon BEAMS, in seconding the motion, said he advocated in certain respects a revision of the Book of Common Prayer. He yielded to none in his admiration for and in his attachment to the book, and it was because he so greatly admired it and was so greatly attached to it that he wished to see it made adaptable to the understandings and the needs of his fellow churchmen of the present generation. Some of the language contained in the book was antiquated, and not easily understood by the people. Further, some of the language was actually misleading to those who used it or heard it used. There was great need of more liberty being given to the officiating ministers. The Athanasian Creed was a noble symbol—(hear, hear)—but it was hardly understood by the great majority of the people. Some liberty should also be allowed in the use of the Burial Service; and a number of collects specially adapted for use in families were also wanted.

The PRESIDENT suggested to the synod that it was advisable to obtain a large variety of opinions on the question, and to this end he desired that the speakers would endeavour to concentrate their arguments. There was a concentration which helped rather than hindered discussion. (Hear, hear.)

The Dean of HOBART hoped that the synod would give the most uncompromising opposition to the motion which had been brought forward by the Bishop of Ballarat. He expressed his entire dissension to the motion, and to a large part of what the mover had said on the subject. He had felt extreme grief and pain on hearing some of the remarks which had fallen from the mover of the resolution. (Hear, hear.) Let them have an appendix to the Book of Common Prayer, but they did not want the volume amended. (Hear, hear.)

The Rev. Canon CHALMERS proposed the following amendment,—"That all the words after the second 'that' in line 1 as far as the word 'changes' in line 3 be omitted, with a view to substitute the following words:—'There exists an urgent need for the compilation of an appendix to the Book of Common Prayer, which shall consist of services for missions and various other special occasions.'" (Hear, hear.) In the course of his speech he said churchmen did not want the English Parliament, which was composed of Jews, Turks, and heretics, to legislate for them. (Hear, hear.)

Archdeacon DRUITT seconded the amendment.

The Rev. W. J. K. PIDDINGTON supported the amendment. It seemed to him that the Bishop of Ballarat's desire was to do something so sweeping and so utterly revolutionary that he (the speaker) was filled with alarm and grief. (Hear, hear.)

The Rev. J. BARNIER supported the motion, which he contended would not have the effect of disparaging the Book of Common Prayer. An altered state of things in the present age required that the book should in some respects be revised. He thought the adding of appendices to the book without revising it would create some confusion. He hoped the synod would use its influence to obtain a revision of the book.

Mr. W. TARLETON, who said he prized the Prayer Book very highly, and did not think there was any need of a revision, supported the amendment. Extempore prayers would not, he said, secure the church from doctrinal charges. (Hear, hear.) When a man began to pray his own prayers, there was no knowing where he would go to. (Laughter.) He hoped the motion would be thrown out by a substantial majority. (Hear, hear.)

The Rev. J. D. LANGLEY expressed his admiration of the address which had been given by the Bishop of Ballarat. He thought the matter of the revision of the Book of Common Prayer and its rubrics a very important question. He would regard it as a matter for great regret if the dear old Prayer Book with all its phraseology, and with all its rubrics, was touched When they began revising there was no knowing where they would end. (Hear, hear.) He admired the manliness and outspokenness which had been displayed by the Bishop of Ballarat.

The Rev. Canon HOWELL, in opposing the motion, acknowledged the courage of the Bishop of Ballarat, but said he had been extremely hurt by the tone of the address which had been given by the right rev. mover. With regard to the non-usage of the burial service, he thought that the service was not too long to be used in the open air. The bishops might see that the whole of the office was properly carried out.

The Dean of MELBOURNE opposed any alteration being made in the Prayer Book. Although other things had changed, he thanked God that that book had not changed. (Applause.) Its very archaisms were precious to churchmen, and if some of its language was not understood by the people it was the office of the clergy to instruct their people in its meaning. (Hear, hear.) He deprecated any attempt to alter the phraseology of the book, and said he thought the loss of one word would be a loss of association, and associations were dear to them. (Applause.)

Archdeacon HALES opposed the motion. In his opinion to touch the Book of Common Prayer would be to touch the noblest possession that any Church or any human society ever held. (Applause.)

Several members of the synod then rose to address the meeting, but they were met with cries of "Divide, divide."

The PRESIDENT said he hoped the synod would not venture upon a division until the matter had been further discussed. He would suggest that more lay members should give the synod the benefit of their opinions upon the subject. (Hear, hear.)

The Dean of BATHURST spoke in favour of and supported the amendment.

Mr. A. R. H. PIETZCKER next spoke. The fact that the matter of the revision of the Prayer Book had been brought forward by the Bishop of Ballarat, and supported by some of the clergy, was quite sufficient to demonstrate to him that the question was deserving of consideration at the hands of a committee. He would support the amendment.

Mr. G. W. HAWKES supported the amendment.

The Rev. A. T. PUDDICOMBE said he thought it was an utter impossibility to obtain a revision which would be anything like as satisfactory as the present Prayer Book. (Hear, hear.) Something more than mere addition to the book was wanted. The clergy needed a greater elasticity in the use of the material they had at hand. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. J. C. B. MONCRIEFF said a revision was needed in the direction of more comprehensiveness in the prayers which were used by the congregation. The motion should be passed by the synod, as it would be a step in the right direction.

The Rev. CHARLES VAUGHAN spoke at length on the subject of the Athanasian Creed. He hoped they were not far from seeing the Prayer Book enriched by the addition of special forms of services.

The Bishop of NEWCASTLE moved the adjournment of the debate.

The Bishop of TASMANIA, in seconding the motion, said he hoped the Primate would deliver an address on the subject before the debate was concluded. (Loud applause.)

At 10.40 the debate was adjourned until Monday, the resumption of the debate to be an order of the day for Monday.

The House then adjourned until 3 p.m. on Monday.

THE REREDOS QUESTION.

We have received a number of communications on the reredos controversy from which we make the following extracts:—

A correspondent, signing himself "Beth," tells a pretty story of filial love, which by implication appears to point to the reredos as too vivid and painful a picture of the great sacrifice for man, and one which should be removed from a place where it would constantly bring that sacrifice too vividly before the eye, but a representation which ought to be preserved elsewhere as a work of art.

"E. J. H. Knapp" asks those in authority to pause ere they sanction the erection of the reredos, as it will drive many loyal members from the Church. He states that he has been assured by a member of the Chapter that when the design was submitted to them there was no evidence thereon that an image was to be set up, and he questions much if the Dean ever gave his consent to the design of the reredos as it is now being erected. He points out the 82nd Canon states:—"A decent communion table in every church, and that the Ten Commandments be set up on the east end of every church, &c.," but no provision has been made to carry out this rule. It would scarcely be consistent to put up this crucifix and inscribe on the same wall the second commandment.

"Crux" is highly pleased that such an ornate, chaste, and beautiful pattern should have been selected for this artistic work in the Cathedral, and asks what could be more consistent than to have such a striking and beautiful memento of Christ's death, as contained in the centre piece (upon which the controversy hinges.) No outcry was raised against the painting of "Christ upon the Cross" when it was inserted in the northern transept of the Cathedral, but now that a similar and more substantial representation is put in its proper place an outcry of indignation and disgust is raised against it, which he hopes will be disregarded by the bishops and chapter. The best test is to leave the reredos where it is until be experience it is seen whether or not it is a stumbling block and a rock of offence.

"Clarendon Stuart" forwards extracts from the Guardian of September 1 to show when Bishop Temple was asked to interfere with the "idolatrous innovation" in a figure of the Crucified in the new reredos at St. Paul's, he declared that he could "see nothing inconsistent with true Protestantism in such a reredos as it is proposed to erect in St. Paul's Cathedral, and the courts of law have so decided."

"John Sulman" asserts that, for his part, he can see little cause for the outcry that has been raised, and states, from his own knowledge, that in hundreds of English churches the same subject in stone, marble, or glass, may now be seen, and apparently without offence to the most tender conscience. As a work of art, he says, the reredos is as good a specimen of ecclesiastical art as is to be found in any church in England, and one of which not only the members of the Church of England but all the citizens of Sydney may be proud.

A correspondent has furnished us with the following copy of the judgment of the Privy Council on the Exeter reredos question, now so frequently referred to, but which is not in the possession of many persons, lawyers excepted:—

"The Exeter reredos case was argued on the 20th of January, 1875, and the two following days by the following counsel:—Mr. W. F. Phillpots and Mr. Shand for Chancellor Phillpots; Dr. Deane, Q.C., and Mr. Walter Phillimore for the Dean and chapter. Judgment of the Lords of the judicial committee of the Privy Council on the appeal of Phillpots v. Boyd and others from the Court of Arches, delivered 25th February, 1875. Present—Sir A. Hatherly, Lord Penzance, Lord Selborne, Lord Chief Baron, Sir Montague Smith, Sir Robert Collier. The following paragraphs contain that portion of the judgment which is based upon the articles, homilies, and canons:—'The twenty-second article of religion declares that the Romish doctrine concerning purgatory, pardons, worshipping, and adoration, as well of images as of reliques, and also invocation of saints, is a fond thing invented and grounded upon no warranty of scripture, but rather repugnant to the Word of God.' In other words, it condemns only the abuse of images. 'But great stress has been laid in the argument of this case upon the homilies against the perils of idolatry, which are recognised in the thirty-fifth article of religion (amongst other homilies) as containing a godly and wholesome doctrine, and necessary for these times, and therefore are judged to be read in churches by the ministers diligently and distinctly, that they may be understood of the people.' 'The 46th and 49th canons give special directions as to the reading of the homilies, and the 80th canon orders the book of homilies to be provided in each parish.' 'This recommendation, however, of the homilies cannot be pressed further than as containing an approbation of doctrines therein contained, and even that of a qualified character, as being specially necessary for the times when the articles were framed and published. Now the homily against the 'Peril of Idolatry' (contained in several parts) sets forth in very glowing colours the vanity and folly of paying adoration or worship to images or paintings; but it recognises the original intention of such images or paintings to have been the better instruction of the ignorant, as set forth in the letter of Gregory to Terenus (cited by the learned Judge in the Court below). The homily observes, 'You may withal note that, seeing there is no ground for worshipping images in Gregory's writing, but a plain condemnation thereof, that such as do worship images do unjustly allege Gregory for them.' The homily, however, proceeds to affirm that the worshipping of images is a necessary consequence of their being allowed to exist; and, therefore, concludes strongly for their entire abolition, irrespective of actual abuse. Now, it is plain that the 'doctrine' maintained by the homily is that of the twenty-second article, and condemns paying 'honour and reverence to images as being an act of idolatry, and contrary to the Second Commandment.' In the judgment of its author the existence of any image, whether originally intended for instruction or not, is dangerous, as tending to idolatry. This cannot be called doctrine. It is an opinion as to the consequences which might at that time follow the use of representations of sacred objects, and probably the opinion might then be well founded; whilst it is, on the contrary, notorious that numerous sculptures and pictures representing the Saviour and apostles and other holy men exist, and have existed for more than two centuries in and outside of our churches, to which no worship has been paid. The old associations were broken off, and the old 'monuments of superstition' had either been removed or become innocuous before the reign of Elizabeth closed. In the 9th of Elizabeth, on a visitation by Archbishop Parker, articles were exhibited, the sixth of which inquired whether any taught 'that any man is borne with which do extol any superstitious religious or religious pilgrimages, lighting of candles, kissing, kneeling or ducking to images.' And at another visitation by the same metropolitan, articles were exhibited, by the sixth of which inquiry is made 'whether images and all other monuments of idolatry and superstition be destroyed and abolished and conveniently kept without waste, destruction, or abuse of anything; whether the rood-loft be pulled down according to the order prescribed, and if the partition between the chancel and the church be kept.' These articles appear to observe the distinction noticed in the Queen's proclamation already referred to, between the representations which had been abused and those which had not. It is not improbable that there had existed some conspicuous representation of a crucifix in the rood-lofts which had been abused, and therefore was directed to be removed. In Cardwell's Annals (vol. I., No. LXXVII.) are articles intended to have been exhibited at Archbishop Grindal's visitation in the 18th of Elizabeth, the fourth of which inquiries whether (amongst other things), 'all images and other relics and monuments of superstition and idolatry be utterly defaced, broken, and destroyed; and if not, where and in whose custody they remain.' It appears to be doubtful whether these articles were ever exhibited. From this time, and notwithstanding the revival in the time of James I. of the Act of 3 and 4 Edward VI., there appears to have been neither further legislation nor inquiry with reference to pictorial or sculptured representations of sacred subjects in churches. What, then, is the character of the sculptures on the reredos in the case before their lordships? For what purpose has it been set up? To what end is it used? And is it in danger of being abused? It is a sculptured work in high relief, in which are three compartments. That in the centre represents the Ascension of our Lord, in which the figure of our ascending Lord is separated by a sort of border from the figures of the Apostles, who are gazing upward. The right compartment represents the Transfiguration, and the left the descent of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost. The representations appear to be similar to those with which everyone is familiar in regard to the sacred objects in question. All the figures are delineated as forming part of the connected representation of the historical subject. The Ascension necessarily represents our Lord as separated from the Apostles, who are gazing at Him on His ascent. As finials to the architectural form of the reredos, there is on each side a separate figure of an angel. It is plain to their lordships that the whole erection has been set up for the purpose of decoration only. It is not suggested that any superstitious reverence has been, or is likely to be, paid to any figures forming part of the reredos, and their lordships are unable to discover anything which distinguishes this representation from the numerous sculptured and painted representations of portions of the sacred history to be found in many of our cathedrals and parish churches, and which have been proved by long experience to be capable of remaining there without giving occasion to any idolatrous or superstitious practices. Their lordships are of opinion that such a decorative work would be lawful in any other part of the church; and, if so, they are not aware of any contravention of the laws ecclesiastical by reason of its erection in the particular place which it occupies. Their lordships have not adverted to the case of Cook and others v. Tallent, mentioned by the learned Judge in the court below, because they have been furnished by the registrar with a full note of that case, which appears to have proceeded on consent. Their lordships desire it to be clearly understood that nothing decided in this case affects the question of superstitious regard being paid, contrary to the 22nd article, to any representations or images that are, or may at any time be, set up in churches. The law will at all times be sufficiently strong to correct and control any such abuse; but their lordships are of opinion that the sculpture in question is not liable to be impugned in that respect. Their lordships will therefore recommend her Majesty to reverse the decree pronounced by the Dean of Arches, so far as it reversed the decree of the Lord Bishop of Exeter in pronouncing for his jurisdiction as visitor and ordinary of the Cathedral Church of St. Peter, in Exeter, but to affirm the decree of the Dean of Arches in all other respects; and their lordships, regard being had to the argument in the court below and before them, in opposition to the jurisdiction of the Lord Bishop, do not decree the payment of any costs of this appeal by any party. Indeed, they understood it to be stated at the bar by the counsel for the respondents that they did not ask for costs."

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—Friday, October 29.

In Banco.—(Before their Honors the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Windeyer, and Mr. Justice Innes.)

THE QUEEN V. BOOTY.

This was a special case stated by his Honor Judge Docker, before whom the prisoner, Philip Galloway Booty, was tried at the Metropolitan Quarter Sessions, in August, for forging and uttering an acquittance and receipt for the sum of £212.

Mr. Wise appeared for the prisoner, and Mr. M'Culloch represented the Crown.

The evidence showed that a co-partnership of certain persons had been formed, which it was intended to register as a company, under the name of the Capertee Lime Company. The prisoner, who was a law clerk, was an intending shareholder, and was the legal manager. An application had been made to the Commissioner for Railways for a railway siding to be constructed near Capertee for the use of the company, and the application was granted on the condition that the company should contribute £214 towards the cost. Accordingly Ambrose Thornley, the chairman of the board of directors, handed to the prisoner a cheque for £212, in error for £214, in order that he might pay it to the Commissioner for Railways. Instead of doing so the prisoner paid the cheque into his own banking account, and operated upon the proceeds. Shortly afterwards Mr. Marcer, another of the directors, asked the prisoner if he had paid the cheque to the Railway Department, and he replied that he had, and produced to Marcer a piece of paper purporting to bear the stamp of the Railway Department and the signature of C. A. Goodchap, Commissioner for Railways, per D. V. This document was an acknowledgment of the receipt of Thornley's cheque for £212 on account of the Lime Company's contribution to the siding. There was also a note at the foot stating that the construction would be proceeded with as soon as possible. It was afterwards found that the money had never been paid, and the company subsequently had to pay £214 to the Railway Department. At the conclusion of the case for the Crown, the prisoner claimed an acquittal on the ground that there was no proof adduced of his intent to defraud some particular person; and also that under section 44 of the Act 24 and 25 Victoria, chap. 98, the intent to defraud had not been made out. The Judge refused to give directions to the jury to that effect.

Mr. Wise said there was really only one ground upon which he asked that the conviction should be quashed. He submitted that there was a misdirection when the Judge told the jury that it was not necessary to find any intent to defraud any particular person. The essence of the offence of forgery consisted in the offence having been committed to the prejudice of somebody. It was not open to a jury to find generally that a document was counterfeited unless there was some evidence from which they could infer that a particular person had been defrauded. Under the English Act it was expressly enacted that it would not be necessary to defraud any particular person, and there must have been some reason for the framers of the New South Wales Act having omitted these words.

The Chief Justice ruled that it was not necessary that any particular person should be defrauded in order to constitute the offence of forgery. It was necessary to show that there was a forgery for the purpose of defrauding, and that had been shown here. The object was clearly to defraud someone of £214. There was a case where a person forged a medical diploma, and hung it up in his room where people could see it. No particular person was defrauded there, but the public generally. There was nothing in the point.

Mr. Justice Innes: If there were anything in the point, it would be found that the very thing that the prisoner contended had not, had been abundantly proved.

Mr. Wise: I am not responsible for the point being taken.

The Chief Justice: We don't say that you are. You came here to argue the matter because you have got the brief.

THE QUEEN V. REIDTMAN.

This was a special case stated by his Honor Judge M'Farland, before whom the prisoner, Jack Henry Reidtman, was tried at the Quarter Sessions at Goulburn, and convicted for obtaining money by a false pretence.

The prisoner was indicted under the 141st section of the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1883, for having falsely pretended to the prosecutor, a hotelkeeper named Bruton, that a certain cheque drawn by the prisoner on the City Bank for £6 10s., and a certain other cheque for £10 drawn by him on the said bank, were good and available, whereby he obtained from Bruton the sums of £4 and £5 respectively. The prisoner had been staying for some days at the prosecutor's hotel, in Goulburn, and had contracted accounts there for which he tendered the cheques in payment, the first on the 9th and the second on the 13th August. When the prosecutor took the cheques nothing was said on either occasion as to their validity, or as to his having money in the bank, nor did the prosecutor ask any questions as to these matters. The prisoner's advocate relied upon this as a defence to the indictment: that the prosecutor Bruton was not asked at the trial by the learned Crown Prosecutor whether or not he had, nor did he state that he had, paid this money upon the faith of any representations made by the prisoner as to the validity of the cheques, nor had Bruton stated that he would not have parted with this money but for such representations. The Judge left the jury to decide whether or not, having regard to these various circumstances, they were satisfied that Bruton had parted with his money on the faith of the cheques being good, for if so, the indictment was sustained.

The Chief Justice said there was nothing in the point. Here was a person who wrote two cheques in payment of some debt which he owed to an innkeeper, and he received a certain amount of cash by way of change. These cheques, it turned out, became dishonoured. The question was whether this money was obtained by means of the representation that the money would be paid over by the bank on the presentation of the cheques. Nothing was said at the time. It was clear that no proof that he represented the cheques to be good was necessary. The mere fact of his having in his possession a cheque and obtaining change for it was sufficient. There had been hundreds of convictions under similar circumstances.

Mr. Justice Windeyer said it seemed that the prosecutor was not asked in so many words whether when he got this cheque he parted with the money believing that the cheque was good. If a person gave a cheque to another, and obtained change for it, even if nothing at all was said about it, they would be justified in presuming that the man would only part with his property on the faith that it was a good cheque.

Mr. Justice Innes said that if a man presented a cheque to him, and he cashed it for him, he could conceive of no more cogent evidence that he believed the cheque was a good one.

The conviction was therefore sustained.

JONES V. HILL.

This was originally an issue under the Real Property Act, in which Jones was the plaintiff, and Hill the defendant. There had been two trials, and two appeals to the Full Court. At the first trial Hill was successful, and the Full Court granted a motion for a new trial. At the next trial Jones was successful, and then the defendant appealed, to the Full Court, which upheld the verdict of the jury on that occasion, but ordered each party to pay his own costs of the first trial and of the first trial rule, and Hill to pay the costs of the second trial and the second trial rule.

Mr. G. B. Simpson now moved that the order directing each party to pay his own costs of the first trial and the first trial rule be amended by inserting that the costs of the first trial and the first trial rule should be paid by the defendant Hill.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Pilcher opposed the application.

Mr. Simpson drew their Honor's attention to the 4th section of the Act 41 Vic., No. 18, which provided that the person who was finally unsuccessful in a litigation should pay his own costs and those of the other side.

The Chief Justice: That is a good general rule when there is no reason to the contrary.

Mr. Simpson said it was a just rule and a right one, and proceeded to argue that the Court had no discretion in the matter.

Mr. Darley cited an old rule of court which prevented a person reopening a matter as to costs when no objection was raised regarding the order at the time, and contended from various authorities that the application could not be granted.

The Chief Justice said that could not stand in the way of the applicant in the present case making this application. What was the case here? A certain order was made as to the payment of costs by different parties—the costs in the action. Some time after that order was made the attention of the Court was called to a statute which showed that the Court had no power to make the order; that the order made was ultra vires, and in the teeth of an Act of Parliament. That matter being brought to their attention, they were met by this old rule, which prevented a person who had assented to an order which was wrong from afterwards reopening the matter, and involved a penalty as well upon the counsel who took up the time of the Court in bringing this matter forward after the time had elapsed when he ought to have drawn attention to it. According to the statute, this Court had no discretion in the matter of these costs, but was bound to give them to the successful party. A rule of court, however, stood in the way of a person insisting upon the rights that the statute conceded to him. The matter having been opened up, it remained for the Court to determine whether this application ought to succeed. A construction had been put upon some old rule by the Bar which would enable the Court to dismiss this application. The 4th section of the Act 41 Vict., No. 18, prescribed certain things in the matter of these applications, and then provided that the costs of every proceeding under this section should be borne by the unsuccessful party. The proceedings here were that an application was made to the Court and an issue joined, and the matter was tried by a jury. After the issue came on for trial there was a verdict in a particular way. Then there was an application made to the Court to set aside the verdict, as the decision was erroneous either in the matter of law or fact; a new trial was granted, but the Court made no order as to costs. On the second trial the jury found for the plaintiff, and the Court then made an order that each party should pay his own costs of the first trial, and also of the application for a new trial, leaving the defendant liable only for the costs of the second trial. Time passed by, and now an application was made to the Court to alter that order on the ground that the Court had no right to deprive the plaintiff of the costs which he was entitled to under the section. The section did not say that there might be an application for a new trial; still, that application, having been made, it became part of the proceedings referred to under the section, and the costs involved were costs incurred under the section. The Court could not see how they were to determine that the costs of the application and costs of the new trial were costs that had been incurred in any other way than under this section. Although they might have been incurred by the Court in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction, still the whole foundation of the trial was this section. The Court was of opinion that this application must be granted; but they did not think they should allow costs, because their attention had not been called to the matter before this late stage.

The application was therefore granted, without costs.

IN RE EDWARD CINNAMOND.

Mr. Gibson applied for a rule nisi for prohibition, calling upon George Maunsell, S.M., and James Williams Evans, to show cause why the conviction of Edward Cinnamond under the 6th section of the Sydney Coal Delivery Act, should not be set aside.

Mr. Gibson, in support of the application, stated that defendant had been convicted by the stipendiary magistrate, under an information laid by Evans, who was an inspector of weights and measures. The conviction was for having a less quantity of coal in the bags he was selling to a customer than was prescribed by the Act. The Act required that the objection must be taken at the time of the delivery of the coal by the purchaser, or his or her agent or servant. It was the purchaser that ought to require the coal to be weighed; but the bags in this instance were weighed at the request of the inspector, who pocketed half the fine. The defendant was supplying the coal, at the time this man Evans happened to be passing, to Mr. Barker, an old customer, and he admitted that he had not half a ton, the quantity ordered, in the cart, but that he had brought all the coal he had in the yard at the time, and intended bringing more to make up the quantity next morning. Some of the bags for that reason did not contain 112lb. required by law. He (Mr. Gibson) asked for the rule on the ground that the purchaser or his wife, or servant, or some other indifferent and credible person should have been the informer, and not a person who received half the fine.

Mr. Justice Windeyer: Why cannot this man or anybody else inform?

Mr. Gibson: Simply because there would be no end to people going about and interfering and making complaints.

Mr. Justice Innes: And a very good thing too. It would keep a watch on dishonest dealers.

The Chief Justice said that section 9 of the Act must be read in connection with section 4, the one prescribing what was to be done, and the other fixing the penalty. Here there had been a sale of more than 5 cwt, and some of the bags contained less than the prescribed weight—112lb. That was the offence for which the defendant had been convicted. There was no ground upon which the Court could grant the rule.

Mr. Justice Innes said it was high time these people were punished for an offence which was far too common.

(Before their Honors the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Faucett, and Mr. Justice Innes.)

THE BOROUGH OF TAMWORTH V. BUSSELL.

Mr. Gordon moved for a rule nisi for a new trial, in this matter, which was heard before his Honor Judge Murray, at the Tamworth District Court.

The action, it appeared, was brought for the recovery of £20 16s. 9d. for rates due in respect of certain property of which the defendant was the owner. £20 of that amount had been due more than six years before the defendant took possession. The 176th section of the Municipalities Act provided that rates should remain a charge upon the rateable property, and might be recovered at any future time. His Honor, however, held that the Statute of Limitations, 21 James I., applied to such rates. He (Mr. Gordon) submitted that there was no limitation as to rates, and if any Statute of Limitations applied, it would be the 3rd and 4th William IV.

The rule nisi was granted, and made returnable for Friday next.

THE BOROUGH OF TAMWORTH V. MATTHEWSON.

Mr. Gordon applied for a rule nisi in this matter upon the grounds stated in the previous case, and the application was granted.

BROWN AND OTHERS V. COURT.

This was an appeal from the District Court, but there being no appearance, the case was struck out.

FOLEY V. SACHS.

This was an appeal from the decision of Judge Docker at the Bathurst District Court, in a matter under the Mining Act, brought before his Honor for re-hearing.

Mr. G. B. Simpson, instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Lawrance, and Jacques, appeared for the appellant Sachs; and Mr. Field to uphold the District Court decision.

It appeared that the plaintiff, Foley, discovered some argentiferous land near Oberon, and informed a person named Larkins of the fact. Larkins communicated the information to Mr. Sachs, who has an office in 83, Pitt-street, telling him that it was likely to prove a valuable silver mine, and that Foley, who pointed out the ground, had not money to take it up. Mr. Sachs authorised Larkins to give Foley £15 to take up the mining area, but Larkins, it appeared, in addition to this, agreed to give Foley £100, besides giving him a share in the mine. Sachs was sued in the Warden's Court, at Oberon for £99 by Foley, and judgment was given in the plaintiff's favour. From that decision Sachs appealed to the District Court, where the case was re-heard. There Sachs only was examined, and he stated that Larkins had no authority to promise Foley £100. He had, he said, received letters from Foley asking for this money, but he did not answer them. He did not appear at the Warden's Court, because he believed that all the warden could do was to forfeit his (Sach's) share in the mine. Larkins had been his agent, but his power was strictly to pay the lease for the lands.

After hearing the arguments of the learned counsel,

The Chief Justice said he was of opinion that the decision of the District Court must be quashed, and that judgment ought to be entered for the appellant.

Mr. Justice Innes said that in cases involving the question of agency they ought to be very careful not to extend the authority of agents.

The appeal was, therefore, upheld, with costs, and judgment was entered for the appellant.

IN RE JAMES GALL.

On the motion of Mr. Cohen, the order of Mr. Justice Windeyer, calling upon Messrs. Gannon and M'Laughlin to deliver a bill of costs, was made an order of the Court.

IN RE J. SCULLY.

Mr. W. J. Foster appeared to move absolute a rule nisi for prohibition, calling upon Edward Reeve, J. Fountain, and George Watt, justices of the peace, at Gosford, and John Aggett, senior constable and district licensing inspector, to show cause why a conviction, against the defendant should not be set aside.

Mr. Ralston appeared on behalf of Constable Aggett to show cause.

The defendant had been convicted at Gosford, upon the information of Aggett, of an offence under the Licensing Acts of 1882 and 1883. It was now sought to quash the conviction, on the grounds that the accused, being unlawfully in custody, was forced to appear, although he had applied for a postponement; and that there was no evidence of exposure for sale of any liquor within the meaning of the Acts.

Mr. Foster said that Constable Aggett and two other constables, named Fraser and M'Diarmid, proceeded along the railway line in course of construction between Homebush and Waratah to a point at Chitteway, between Gosford and Wyong. There they saw drinking and playing of cards going on. There was a number of tin pannikins and pint pots in one of the tents, and on entering it they found some malt liquor in one of the pint pots, and on making a search they found under the bed a bottle half-full, containing rum, and two other bottles containing liquor. This, Mr. Foster contended, could not in any sense be regarded as exposure for sale.

Mr. Ralston maintained that, as the judgment of the Court of Petty Sessions had been satisfied before the making of the application for prohibition, the rule ought to be discharged, and in support of his contention he cited the case ex parte Foster, 11 Supreme Court Reports, and also that of ex parte Potter, 1 Supreme Court Reports.

The Chief Justice said there was no evidence that anything had been exposed for sale on this occasion. Two or three persons were watching round these tents, and after some time they went into one of the tents, and there they found a number of tin billies, or pint pots as they were called, with nothing in them, but there were traces in one of them of their having been malt liquor there. They found under a bed a bottle containing rum and two other bottles containing spirituous liquor, but there was no evidence of that spirituous liquour being offered for sale to any person. The defendant was taken into custody, and he was fined under the Licensing Acts, and paid the fine. Now an application was made for prohibition, on the ground that there was no evidence to support the conviction. It was quite evident that there was none. The Court might have had some doubt if the prohibition would lie, on account of the money having been paid; but in a case very like this an objection of the same character was raised, and the contention that the prohibition would not lie on account of payment of the money was overruled. This conviction was entirely without evidence to support it, and although the money had been paid the prohibition must go.

Mr. Justice Faucett concurred, remarking that it was just possible that this man might have had liquor for sale, but in his opinion the evidence did not support the information.

The conviction was quashed, and it was ordered that the money paid be refunded, and that the confiscated liquors should be returned.

The Court then adjourned.

In Equity.—(Before his Honor the Primary Judge.)

DEMBECKI V. TUCKER.

Plaintiff appeared in person.

Mr. C. J. Manning appeared on behalf of Mr. Dunn, the solicitor. This was an application for change of attorney to Mr. de Boos.

His Honor granted the application, without prejudice to Mr. Dunn's right to recover his costs on taxation. The proceedings in an action pending would be stayed. The costs of this application would be included in the costs of the case. His Honor advised plaintiff (who is a foreigner) not to get mixed up with two solicitors by playing fast and loose first with one and then with the other. Now that Mr. de Boos was appointed his solicitor, plaintiff should stick to him.

IN RE F. J. CHOWNE AND OTHERS (INFANTS).

Dr. Donovan applied for the appointment of Mrs. L. H. Taylor (née Chowne) as guardian of the four minor children (two of her sister's and a brother) of the deceased F. J. Chowne and Mary Chowne (formerly of Pyrmont) under the will of the said Mary Chowne.

Mr. C. J. Manning, who appeared for the trustees, opposed the application, as they, and also a majority of the family who were of age, desired that the eldest unmarried sister, Mary Jane Chowne (who Dr. Donovan stated was living with a Mr. and Mrs. Scott), should have charge of the minor children.

Dr. Donovan read several affidavits in support of the application.

Mr. C. J. Manning said the trustees were willing that Miss Mary Chowne should be appointed co-guardian with Mrs. Taylor, and that the children should continue to live with the latter. It was alleged that Mrs. Chorone had expressed as her last wish that her infants should reside with Mrs. Taylor. It was only desired to control effectually the expenditure under Mrs. Chowne's will. Mrs. Taylor had been appointed sole executrix by Mrs. Chowne.

After some further argument,

His Honor said he found no difficulty in ordering the appointment of Mrs. Taylor as prayed for. It was very undesirable that the children should have two guardians. The mother had evidently wished that Mrs. Taylor should take charge of these children during their minority, and under the father's will Mrs. Chowne had been placed in a prominent position with respect to them, inasmuch as he had given her the sole disposal of his money at his death. This control was meant to be exercised not only during the mother's lifetime, but after her death. Then it was sworn that she was desirous shortly before her death that Mrs. Taylor should have the custody of the children. The directions given in Mrs. Chowne's will were no doubt in excess of her power over her property, but showed her intention and desire that the interest on certain money should be applied to the education of the minor children; and also that, at the discretion of Mrs. Taylor, some of the principal might, if necessary, be applied to the same purpose. These things virtually put Mrs. Taylor into the position of guardian, and were sufficient to guide his Honor to the decision that she should be made sole guardian. As regarded the amount to be allowed for the education and maintenance of the children, it would be fixed at £3 per week, subject to liberty to apply for an increase by-and-bye if more money were required for their education. The education of the boy was nearly completed; he was apprenticed to a trade, and earning something for himself, the whole of which he ought not to spend upon himself. The costs of this application would come out of the infants' shares in the estate.

HEYDON V. CROKER.

Mr. Knox, for plaintiff, moved that the above suit be dismissed without costs.

There was no opposition, and his Honor made the order as prayed.

PARKINSON V. LOGAN.

Mr. Walker, for plaintiff, applied for the injunction in this matter to be dissolved.

Mr. Knox, for defendant, appeared to consent.

Mr. Simpson appeared on behalf of the Commissioner of Railways, and claimed the commissioner's costs in the application.

Mr. Knox suggested that the question of the commissioner's costs should be reserved.

His Honor said he could not exercise any judgment in the matter. The commissioner must get his costs from somebody. Plaintiff must pay the costs without reference to the question whether he or defendant would ultimately be chargeable with them. [It was subsequently agreed between the parties that the chief clerk should be instructed to settle the order.]

BOYLE V. FRESHILL.

Mr. Armstrong applied for an order to revise suit in the above matter, in which Sir Alexander Stuart's executors and others were concerned.

His Honor granted the application.

MURPHY V. DUNN.

Mr. A. Gordon, jun., moved for leave to fix a day for hearing this suit, and mentioned that the 23rd November might be a convenient date to set it down for as a special case.

His Honor said he would take it on that day if he could make it convenient to do so.

FIELD V. TATE.

On the motion of Mr. Walker, this matter was adjourned for a fortnight.

PROUDFOOT AND ANOTHER V. BANK OF NEW ZEALAND.

Mr. Walker and Mr. H. Manning for plaintiffs; Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Knox for the bank.

This was a motion for leave to draw up the order made in this case on 6th August last. Mr. Darley moved that the order nisi be suspended or removed.

Mr. Walker objected to the motion. The order of 6th August which this motion sought to have drawn up without further delay was made directing Messrs. Proudfoot to do certain things named in the decree made on the hearing of the suit, at which a settlement had been arrived at. That order having been brought to the Master's office to be dealt with in the usual way, the learned counsel's clients moved on the 15th September that the drawing up of the order should be suspended, on the ground that the bank had not delivered over a certain certificate to Messrs. Proudfoot, given under the hand of the Minister for Lands in New Zealand, which they alleged had been delivered into the bank's custody. The bank denied the receipt of it. When the bank applied to the Proudfoots to carry out their part of the decree, they had everything ready, but they said, "You carry out your part, and let us have that certificate." The bank said they had not the certificate, could not find it, and that in fact they had never had it. Now they moved that his Honor's order of 6th August be no longer suspended, and that the bank should not be compelled to deliver up the certificate. He argued that the present motion was nothing less than an appeal by the bank from his Honor's own order.

Mr. Darley contended that it was nothing of the kind. It introduced material which was all new, and based upon fresh affidavits.

Mr. Walker said his objection was independent of any affidavits.

Mr. Darley replied that the materials of this motion came now before the Court for the first time. Supposing that a rule nisi was asked for upon four grounds, and that the Court granted it upon two of the grounds and refused it upon the two others, and the other party appealed to the Privy Council on the two grounds that the Court had not decided, would not an appeal lie on those two other grounds? He was of opinion that it certainly would. This appeal, if it was one, was made in order to save time. They applied for only the suspension of the order.

After hearing further argument,

His Honor allowed the case to proceed.

Numerous affidavits were then read on both sides, and the case was proceeding when the Court rose. It will be resumed next Friday.

The Court then adjourned till Monday.

In our report of the case of Ewing v. Cummings and others, which appeared in yesterday's issue, it should have been stated that Mr. Perry (not Mr. Hickey) appeared for Susan Cummings.

AYLETT V. HARVEY.

The plaintiff, Alfred W. Aylett, sued the defendant, James Harvey, residing at the Tradesman's Arms Hotel, Woolloomooloo, to recover the sum of £100. The defendant, it was alleged had, by agreement in writing, contracted and agreed with the plaintiff that if he (the plaintiff) renovated a billiard-table standing in the billiard-room of defendant's hotel, and provided a first-class new cloth for it and a set of ivory billiard-balls, he would let him the room rent free for a period of two months, and at the expiration of that time would let it to him for a further period of two months at a monthly rental of £4 5s.; and it was further agreed that the plaintiff should have free ingress and egress for himself and the public to the room, according to the usual mode of entrance, and between the hours of 9 a.m. and 11 p.m. each day; the plaintiff agreeing to keep the room clean and conduct it in an orderly manner and pay the cost of lighting, &c. All this plaintiff said he fulfilled on his part, but the defendant would not allow the plaintiff and public ingress and egress from the room during the tenancy, but kept the usual entrance locked, whereby the plaintiff was unable to carry on his business, and was compelled to abandon the room, whereupon the defendant took possession of it with the billiard-table and billiard balls. The defence was that there was no such agreement.

A verdict was given for defendant.

POLICE.

At the Central Police Court yesterday the bench in the Charge Division was occupied by Mr. W. Johnson, S.M. A number of persons were punished for being drunk or disorderly. Maud Howard, found guilty of stealing a pair of boots, the property of John Rafter, was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment. Elizabeth Clifford, charged with being an immoral character, was sentenced to a month's imprisonment. Michael Tobin, found guilty of assaulting Laura Cotton, was fined 40s., or 21 days; and, for having a valance in his possession, for which he could not satisfactorily account, Pietrio Martini was sent to prison for a month. James Wright, for wilfully injuring a tree in Hyde Park, was fined 5s., or 24 hours. John Norton, found guilty of stealing a piece of tweed, valued at £5, the property of Turner and Robinson, was sent to prison for six months. The bench in the Summons Court was occupied by Mr. L. Yates, D.S.M. About 100 persons were fined from 10s. to 20s., with costs, for keeping unregistered dogs, and others were punished for obstructing traffic, or permitting animals to stray. J. Edwards, found guilty of gaming on Sunday, was fined 10s. and 2s. 6d. costs, and Henry Isenberg, for keeping a ferocious dog, was fined 20s. and 4s. 10d. costs. Jane Gilbert, summoned for having kept her house open on Sunday, was fined £3.

Mr. J. M Marsh, S.M., presided in the Charge Division of the Water Police Court, and disposed of a large number of cases. Patrick Gibbons was fined £3, in default two months' imprisonment, for using indecent language in George-street. An elderly man named Thomas Collins was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions on a charge of entering the dwelling-house of Clara Schruld, No. 105, Elizabeth-street, and stealing therefrom certain articles of jewellery, value in all £40. Elizabeth Hodge was mulcted in a penalty of 40s., in default 14 days to gaol, for using indecent language in Phillip-street. Louisa Glading was fined 40s., or two months' imprisonment, for an act of indecency in the reserve at Coogee. John Smith, charged with assaulting Constable Abel, by striking him whilst he was in the execution of his duty, was fined 40s., or 21 days to gaol. For using obscene language in Queen-street, Woollahra, the prisoner was further fined £3; in default, two months' imprisonment. Edward Graham and George Gordon, labourers, pleaded guilty to stealing a swag containing a number of articles of wearing apparel, value £2 10s., the property of another labourer, named Henry Nicholas. The prosecutor stated that he had been working on the Government relief works at the Field of Mars, but at the present time he was out of employment. He had been travelling with a mate, and the two of them had their clothes tied up in the swag. On Wednesday night the swag was placed in a boatshed at Woolloomooloo Bay. The prisoners knew that it was in the boatshed. All the men slept in the Domain that night, as they had nowhere else to go to. Prosecutor and his mate missed the swag some few hours after they had placed it in the shed. In reply to the Bench, accused stated they had never been in trouble before, and they took the swag because they wanted bread. Mr. Marsh, in sentencing each of the men to a month's imprisonment, said they had done a cruel act, as the men from whom they had stolen the swag were almost as hard up as they (the prisoners) were. Lionel Andre was charged with obtaining the sum of £8 from Charles Murphy, a drill instructor, residing at the Dove Inn, Sussex-street, by a false pretence—to wit, a valueless cheque, and with intent to defraud. The accused met the prosecutor at the hotel, and asked him to change a cheque for him, at the same time stating that he was a Ceylon money-lender. Murphy said he had no objection to oblige the accused, and gave him some money, receiving a cheque, which was subsequently found to be valueless. In answer to Mr. Marsh, the prisoner said he was a stranger in Sydney, having recently arrived in New South Wales from Colombo, Ceylon. The accused received a sentence of six months' imprisonment. Mr. A. M. Fisher, D.S.M., sat in the Summons Court, and disposed of a large quantity of business.

At the instance of Inspector Seymour, several persons were fined for allowing filth to remain on their premises. Joe Marsh, the occupier of a house in Great Barcom-street, was fined £4 and costs 5s., in default one month to gaol, for allowing his premises to remain in a filthy state. John Rushton, of 342, Sussex-street, was fined £10 and 5s. costs, or three months' imprisonment, for a similar offence. Sandenbergen*, baker, was charged by James W. Evans, inspector of weights and measures, with having in his possession for sale 16 4lb. tin loaves 30oz. short in weight. The defendant pleaded guilty, and was ordered to pay a fine of £7 10s. (being at the rate of 5s. per oz. of bread short) with 5s. 6d. court costs, and £1 1s. complainant's costs, or to be imprisoned for a term of two months; half the fine to go to the informer, and the bread to be confiscated for the benefit of the Soup Kitchen. James Paul, proceeded against by his wife, Elizabeth Paul, for maintenance, was ordered to pay £1 a week for 12 months towards her support. Emma Penman was mulct in 40s., with the option of one month, for making use of obscene language in George-street, Waterloo.

Lamb, Js.P., presided at the same court yesterday. John St. George, charged with assaulting William Whiting, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, with hard labour.

THE FURNITURE TRADE.

THE COLONIAL TRADE.

The furniture trade in this colony stands to-day in a peculiar position. It is at present dull, but generally speaking this dulness is not attributed to a depression in trade throughout the world, or to unpropitious seasons in Australia or the colony, but it seems to be agreed by those connected with the trade that manufacturers of furniture have to contend against the sale of imported goods on the one hand and local Chinese competition on the other. The sale of furniture in Sydney is large, and the number of dealers is by no means small; but the number of Chinese furniture manufactories in Sydney and its suburbs, is in excess of the colonial manufactories. It is stated that many of the colonial cabinetmakers have left that branch of the trade and taken up carpentering instead. Dealers state that although they prefer very much to encourage colonial workmen by selling exclusively their goods, yet the great bulk of buyers desire a cheap article, and if they cannot get it at one place they will at another; hence the increase of Chinese goods in the market. While this is true, it must not be supposed that furniture is not manufactured in the colony. On the contrary, an examination of the stock of many metropolitan warerooms will show that a superior class of furniture is turned out by skilled colonial artizans. Local manufacturers, while acknowledging that a good wage and eight hours daily labour are desirable (theoretically speaking), state that, unless such customs of trade are of universal application throughout the colony, they have serious difficulties to contend against. As regards the import trade, manufacturers seem to think a heavier ad valorem duty might act as an encouragement to colonial cabinet-makers. In this connection a glance at the figures, showing the amount of furniture imported into the colony from the principal exporting countries during last year and the first seven months of the current year, may not be uninteresting.

To ascertain the present condition of the furniture trade in the metropolis and suburbs and hence, generally speaking of the colony, a representative of this journal obtained the statements of a number of gentlemen connected with the trade relative thereto, as follows:—

Mr. James Lawson (James Lawson and Sons) said that, speaking from an experience of 27 years, he could state that the condition of the furniture trade was at present deplorable. A certain class of goods were sold in this colony at a cheaper rate than they would be in England. Certain parties went from this country and established themselves in London, where they collected all manner of goods in the English market, and as soon as a sufficient quantity was so collected it was sent out here, and sold at auction. This was a tremendous disadvantage to men who had to work here at a fair wage. Before the present ad valorem duties were imposed, furniture and upholstery could be manufactured in all parts of the world and sent here to compete against us, who had first to pay a duty on material. He advocated a duty on imported furniture of from 10 to 15 per cent. He was called upon daily to help poor cabinetmakers, who offered to work for nothing. At his factory at Newtown he was only working upon stock. Only half the number of men were employed at his factory compared with this time last year. Twenty years ago he could point out 100 apprentices to cabinetmaking who were only too glad to learn their trade: but this could not be done now. The men seemed to have gone out of the trade. Chinese manufactures interfered with the cheap class of trade. The wages paid here to cabinetmakers—from 8s. to 9s. per day—were about the same as were paid in the best class of establishments in London.

Mr. James Aylward, cabinetmaker, stated that the furniture trade was at present in a very bad condition, and that no man could engage in it nowadays unless the colony adopted a protective policy. He wanted to see a 25 per cent. ad valorem duty placed on imported furniture; but thought we could compete with a 15 per cent. duty. He had been connected with the furniture trade for 40 years, of which period 25 years had been spent in America. The principal difficulty which local manufacturers had to contend against was the importation of cheap goods from London. If they had to compete with the best kind of goods, a fair business could be done with a 15 per cent. duty; but with our present tariff of wages and short hours of work the present state of the import market presented very great difficulties to the local manufacturer. Chinese competition did not amount to very much, because their work was of an inferior character. The Chinese work competed very seriously, however, with a cheaper kind of goods. When the German importing trade became more extensive, the colonial manufacturing trade would become much worse than at present. He paid his men from £2 15s. to £3 per week. Last year he had 40 men employed, but now he had only 12 men at work. The furniture trade had been diminishing for the last five years. About three years ago a good many cabinetmakers left their trade and went into the carpenters' trade, in which they now remained. He had good machinery and a good class of workmen, but still he could not compete with the imported goods. Importation had ruined the better class of the furniture trade, and Chinese work the cheaper kind of work.

Mr W. W. Campbell, Castlereagh-street, stated that he spoke from an experience of 11 years in the furniture trade. A depression had been coming on for the last six months. He had had as many as 80 men employed, but now he had only 55 hands at work as against 75 men last year. His men received from 30s. up to £4, but the average pay would be about £2 10s. They all work in piecework except the machine men. Auction sales had a great deal to do with this depression. The market had been flooded with imported goods. A heavy ad valorem duty was the only way of putting a stop to this in the future. He did not think the trade was better in Melbourne. Not long ago some of his men left Sydney for Melbourne, but with one exception they had all returned. The Chinese competition was a very serious problem for furniture manufacturers in this colony. Chinese work was quite equal to many kinds of cabinetmaking in the various lines they had taken up. They had indeed done very well, and he would prefer it to much of the furniture which was made by Englishmen and sent out here to be sold. The Chinese had of late years improved very much. Their work was always more or less saleable, but lately they had been copying English patterns, and were turning out now a very much better class of goods. If it were not for the Chinese work and the imported goods made up cheaply in London, any number of factories would spring up in the colony. He considered the present tariff absurd, but if any were imposed he thought a 5 per cent. ad valorem on raw material and 25 per cent. on the manufactured article should be imposed.

Mr. R. Venn Brown (Farmer and Co.) said that the furniture sold in this colony was chiefly imported or Chinese manufacture. A good deal of furniture was sold by auction, but such furniture was of a cheap London make, manufactured specially for the purpose. This feature of the furniture market created a demand for cheap goods. Chinese furniture was substantial enough, but was rough and coarse, and did not compare with that made by European manufacturers. This Chinese competition was a serious matter for furniture manufacturers. The great difficulty in the trade was to get people to pay for good furniture, since they all expected to get the cheapest article for their money.

Anthony Hordern and Sons.—A representative of this firm stated that nearly all of the frames for upholstering were imported, as was also most of the furniture, which was nearly all imported or Chinese work. Upholstering was the principal thing done in the manufacturing line in this colony. There were very few furniture manufacturers in the city and suburbs, exclusive of the Chinese. In this connection he stated that he did not believe in Chinese labour, but dealers all had to support it to a certain extent, because the competition was very keen, and in some instances they could not compete with the trade if they ignored Chinese work altogether. A Chinaman would make a deal table for a price from 30 per cent. to 50 per cent. less than a European manufacturer could make it. Chinese could put furniture together as well as any European. If a man were to get a 50-guinea bedroom set from London, and tell a Chinese cabinetmaker to make one similar to it, the Chinese would go and make an exactly similar article for 30 guineas. They had imported not long ago an Early English ebonized table, costing £5 15s., and they had now an imitation of it, made by a Chinese workman, which was selling at £2 2s. Still there were many things which were manufactured in England which we could not make so cheaply in this country—for instance, frame-work for what-nots and toilet pairs. Now Chinese did not attempt to make that: they went more into solid work, such as chests of drawers, wardrobes, &c. Within the last 18 months the Chinese had been imitating the best class of English goods, and had been so far successful that really the imports had been considerably less. As to the state of the trade, so far as they were concerned, they were doing from 15 per cent. to 20 per cent. better than this time last year, having 11 more hands employed at their factory. There was an increased trade in Vienna chairs and the better class of upholstered furniture.

Turbeville Smith and Co.—Mr. H. Y. Norton, representing this firm, said that the very bad condition of the furniture trade just now was owing to the auction sales. About two-thirds of their furniture was imported, but the rest was manufactured here in the colony. So far as they were concerned the Chinese competition did not affect them. Yet speaking from a general trade point of view undoubtedly the Chinese were a curse. The same state of affairs, in this connection, existed in Brisbane as in this colony. A case occurred the other day, where a country buyer wanted a number of washstands. They were asked to name a price for the articles, and 12s. 6d. was named as the lowest they could be made for apiece in a creditable manner. They stated, however, if Chinese work was desired they could be made at 8s. each. Now, if the Chinese were not here, in the trade, these washstands would have to be bought for 12s. 6d, and the wholesale buyer could make a larger profit himself.

Mr. Walter Bradley (Bradley, Newton, and Lamb) said that one unacquainted with the furniture trade would be surprised at the prices furniture could be bought for at the East-end of London in Curtain-road. There furniture was made in little rooms by poor mechanics, who would be assisted perhaps by their wives and children. You could get there, for instance, a marble washstand for 12s. 6d. Well, such furniture was bought up and shipped out to Australia and sold at auction. Suppose some one were to start a chair factory in this colony, and turn out chairs for 4s. each; well, as soon as that was done some one would immediately bring chairs out here and sell them for 2s. each. To give an idea how business was done, he would mention that the other day he bought 20 pianos (of Bord's make) for £7 less than he could have bought them at Bord's establishment at home. For the last 15 years he had not seen any prosecutions reported in the English papers for fraudulent insolvency. By the English law, if you sell any goods for less than their fair value, the person buying them is liable to be prosecuted for receiving property believing it to be stolen, and the party selling it would be prosecuted for fraudulent insolvency. Now, the way they managed this affair was, when a man was "in a bad way" in business he got an "advance" on his goods, and the person making the "advance" finds a good market for the articles in Australia. Such a practice as this, of course, had a bad effect on the local import trade, and "broke up" the local manufacture. When the Chinese first started to manufacture furniture in this colony, about seven or eight years ago, they could not get the parts of furniture straight. That defect seemed to be remedied now. The Chinese had the whole of the local manufacturing business in their own hands now. If the Chinese were to give up manufacturing now the dealers would be affected. The competition was not between the Curtain-road people and the colonial workmen, but between the Chinese and the people of Curtain-road. The way to meet the cheap import difficulty was to have a measurement duty on furniture, or a duty at so much a cubic foot. The Chinese competition could be only met by the employment of machinery.

David Want and Co.—Mr. J. H. Watson, representing the above-named firm, said that whilst Chinese competition did not affect their trade at all, since they manufactured their own goods for their own customers, yet undoubtedly the greater part of furniture sold in this colony was either imported or of Chinese manufacture, and between these two came the colonial manufacture. For a certain demand nothing could be produced in this colony to compete with the Chinese furniture. Trade-unionism had got things into such a condition that cheap articles could not be produced by colonial artisans. The workingman would not buy furniture at a rate which he himself insisted upon working for, hence his previous remark concerning the Chinese.

CHARGE OF ROBBERY FROM AN HOTEL.

COMMITTAL OF THE ACCUSED FOR TRIAL.

At the Water Police Court (before Mr. Marsh, S.M.) on Wednesday, William O'Brien, John Nestor, Patrick Gray, Joseph Nicholls, Arthur Milson or Seymour, Daniel Keenan, George Richardson or Bludon, and David Harkness, on remand, were charged with being concerned with others in stealing £2 10s. from the till of the Richmond Hotel, Francis-street, the moneys of the licensee of the hotel, James Partridge.

After hearing evidence on Thursday morning,

Mr. Marsh said he would read over the depositions in the afternoon, and give his decision yesterday.

Yesterday morning his Worship said he had looked through the depositions, and he was of opinion that there was a prima facie case against the accused.

Mr. Lowe said he had witnesses to call for the defence; but as his Worship had said that it would not alter his decision, he would in this case refrain from doing so. He would not call witnesses to expose his hand to the police if the Bench decided to send the accused for trial. In concluding his remarks Mr. Lowe asked Mr. Marsh not to send the accused for trial, as he (the solicitor) refused to believe that the young men had committed a robbery.

Mr. Partridge (who was recalled by the Bench) said he wished to persist in the charge, as all the prisoners were guilty.

The witness Stafford made a similar statement.

After some further remarks from Mr. Lowe,

Mr. Marsh read the usual caution, to which the prisoners replied that they were "not guilty."

The whole of the prisoners were committed to take their trial at the Quarter Sessions. Bail allowed.

Captains, officers, lawyers, clergymen, merchants, all take Marshall's "Tonic Nervine," the great restorative tonic and popular strengthening medicine. Sold everywhere. Price 5s. 6d.—[Advt.]

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1886.

Although the official mind will see very little to laugh at in the new regulation by which the office hours in the Government departments have been altered from 10 to 5, instead of 10 to 4, the non-sympathetic public will probably be inclined to treat it as a joke. Popular prejudices cling about all the occupations of life; and in the case of the Civil Service the prevalent ideas long since found themselves expressed in the phrase which describes the method of work adopted in it as "the Government stroke." This happy expression probably owes its origin to the associations of primitive times, when the patriotic exiles, who had left their country for their country's good, were seen handling their tools as if they dearly liked to linger over their work as long as possible. Instead of the pick or the shovel being wielded with a hearty vigour, it was handled as gently and slowly as an artist handles his brush. The association of ideas quickly transferred the "Government stroke" from the road to the office; and the rows of clerks who were seen plying their pens in the Government departments were supposed to act on the same principle, spinning out their work till the clock released them from their labours at 4. Thus it has come about that the public have never believed in the zeal or energy of the Civil Service. The prevailing impressions on the subject appear to be traditional, since they may be traced through the pages of many an English satirist. Long before DICKENS wrote his well-known description of the "Circumlocution Office," in which he represented the great army of Government officials laboriously enaged in doing nothing, the whole system of the English Civil Service had been a standing butt for sarcastic jokes, as well as a theme for stern denunciation at the hands of economical reformers. But the system has managed to survive both the jokers and the economists, and will probably continue to do so, notwithstanding its admitted extravagance and inefficiency. Lord RANDOLPH CHURCHILL has recently declared his belief that the Civil Service estimates might be reduced by two or three millions of money, without injury to the public service. Such a reform might possibly be effected; but the probability is that it never will be.

The present regulation with respect to office hours has presumably originated in the desire of the Government to initiate a system of retrenchment in the Civil Service. The argument appears to be that, if any considerable reduction is to be made in the staff of the various departments, the additional work to be done by those who are retained in the service will require longer time to do it in. It may also be argued that, whether any reductions are to be made or not, the actual amount of work should be increased to the extent of one hour a day. The first suggestion presents itself as a matter of calculation; the second assumes the shape of a principle. Whether Government officials ought to work for six or for seven hours a day is a question that does not present much difficulty in itself. Seeing that in professional and mercantile circles the usual office hours have always been seven at least, it is not easy to see why they should have been fixed at six in Government offices. Public work is, for the most part, of a routine character, and therefore more or less easy, while it is generally done under comfortable circumstances, in roomy and well-appointed offices, with every possible convenience. No one has ever heard of Government clerks being systematically overworked like bank clerks or merchants' clerks. The universal impression is that all the Government departments are overmanned and under-worked, and it is not likely that a universal impression is altogether a wrong one. At any rate, it is clear that if Civil servants are sufficiently worked at the rate of six hours a day, then the clerks in mercantile and professional offices, who are regularly worked for seven hours, with nightwork frequently thrown in, have much to complain of. We need say nothing about the unfortunate shopmen, whose hours range from eight to nine a day, and whose work is generally done under very trying conditions. But when we find that in every business circle outside the Civil Service the hours of work are invariably longer than they are in it, it is safe to infer that the system adopted in the public service is not the right one.

There is clearly no reason why public work should not be done on the same principles and under the same conditions as private work, and perhaps the best means of effecting reform in the Civil Service would be to assimilate its management as much as possible to that adoped in private offices—not only as regards the hours of work, but the method in which it is carried on. The great evil of the Civil Service is its tendency to overgrowth. Too many hands are employed to do the work in most, if not all, of the departments, and consequently the cost of administration becomes an ever-increasing burden on the revenue. That mistake is never made in any private business. Even in the case of companies or firms employing hundreds of clerks and workmen, two men are rarely seen doing the work of one. The tendency is too much the other way, the temptation to exact as much work as possible out of the employees being the guiding rule in most establishments. There ought to be no difficulty in avoiding either extreme in the public service, nor would there be any under a proper system of management. The most prolific source of waste, both of labour and money, lies in the existing methods of carrying on the public business. A little matter which in a private office is done at once by a single hand sometimes takes up the time of half-a-dozen hands in the Government service. If, for instance, a bottle of ink and a box of pens happen to be required in a Government office, a printed form of requisition has to be filled up, specifying the articles required and other particulars, and then transmitted through several channels to the Government storekeeper, who then supplies the bottle of ink and the box of pens—each of the very best quality—in a Government cart. It is in this way that work is made as well as done in the public service. There is an endless multiplication of every little detail connected with the public business, apparently devised for the purpose of finding something like occupation for idle people. Such a system is simply ridiculous; but it nevertheless exists, and will continue to exist until reform comes, not merely in the shape of retrenchment, but in that of a common-sense application of means to ends.

It is quite refreshing to hear of any large scheme of private enterprise. The Government is so much looked to in these colonies to do everything at the public cost, that speculators are to a large extent deterred and discouraged. But the offer made by the Messrs. CHAFFEY to reclaim from barrenness and to irrigate 250,000 acres of the Mallee scrub on the Lower Murray is one that is quite calculated to rouse the courage of many people who had begun to despair. These gentlemen are not Australians, and they do not propose to go to work in New South Wales, but none the less do we feel an interest in their scheme, and we hope that their negotiations with the Government of Victoria may be successful, and that a splendid profit may wait upon their enterprise. The Messrs. CHAFFEY are Canadians, but they have been for the last ten years engaged in irrigation works in Southern California, the country which Mr. DEAKIN lately visited, and the irrigation works which he has so fully described in his official report. If his visit was the cause of the return visit of these gentlemen to Victoria, and if they only do a fraction of what they propose to do, Mr. DEAKIN's trip will become historical.

If there is one sentiment that is very strong in Australia at the present time, it is that of hostility to the acquisition by capitalists of large blocks of land, and the proposal to make a grant or give a right of pre-emption to speculators would be scouted by many politicians without further inquiry. But the Government that took the lead in the bursting-up land tax has been negotiating to grant to two speculators a quarter of a million acres. The shock that this may give to some land reformers will, however, be mitigated when they understand that the land is hardly worth anything in a state of nature, and that after improvement it is nearly all to be subdivided into small holdings. The Government itself holds 10,000,000 acres of this sort of land, which at present yields very little in the way of either rent or produce; and if successful speculators can only show how this land can be turned to excellent account, the Government will owe them a great deal more than they will owe the Government.

The land asked for is on the Mildura run, about eleven miles above the junction of the Darling. It is partly sandy, with some open saltbush plain, intersected by belts of mallee, and with scrub-timbered strips; but the greater part is covered with scrub, and poor as it is by nature it has been made worse by the rabbits. At present all the Government gets in the way of rent is a penny for every fourteen acres, or the fourteenth part of a penny per acre. Judged by its rental, the capital value of the land on a sixteen years' purchase would be about twopence an acre. Mr. BLACK, the present Surveyor-General, says that, taking into account all possible prospective value, the land could not be considered worth more than five shillings an acre. This is the unpromising bit of land which the energetic Canadians propose to civilise, and if they had a free gift of it, conditioned on doing what they promise, the State would not be a loser. The agreement, however, proposes that they should only have 50,000 acres as a free grant, and that for the remaining 200,000 acres they should pay a pound an acre, or four times the highest possible estimate of its present value. In other words, on four-fifths of their land they will pay a price enhanced by the outlay of their own capital. They are to begin work on the first 50,000 acres, and in the course of twenty years they undertake to spend £300,000 in improvements, principally irrigation works, and they are not to get a grant till they have spent five pounds per acre. They are prepared to devote one-fifteenth of the improved land to establish and endow an agricultural college, in which shall be taught the theory and practice of irrigation, as well as the preserving and drying of fruit. If they deal with the first 50,000 acres to the satisfaction of the Government, they are then to be allowed to purchase the 200,000 acres at a pound an acre. They guarantee to keep for themselves not more than 5000 acres in freehold, and to subdivide the rest into blocks of from 80 to 160 acres when prepared for gardening and farming purposes.

Small experiments have already been made in different parts of Australia in the way of irrigation, but nothing on so magnificent a scale as this. One might suppose that the Messrs. CHAFFEY were dreaming were it not that they are practical men, with several years' experience. They have inspected the land, they have studied the available water, and they have considered the question of markets, and as the result they are prepared to commit themselves to the enterprise. At a time when all are asking the Government to do something, it is quite exhilarating to find men asking the Government to do nothing but give them the opportunity to go to work, and get for themselves the profit of making the wilderness blossom as the rose. An example of this kind is sure to be infectious, and if the experiment at Mildura only realises a tenth of what is promised we shall have many imitations of it. And let us hope that New South Wales will come in for its share. There is no provision in our Land Act enabling the Government to make a similar agreement, and Mr. COPELAND might consider the expediency of introducing some clause for the purpose in his amending bill. Perhaps, even apart from Government action, some of the mammoth squatters who have been forced by free selection to purchase huge estates, and are now repenting it, may see their way to transfer their properties to irrigation companies. Of course, if this is done, the question of water-right will become an important one, and will need to be promptly and equitably dealt with.

Despite the depression of the times, the meetings of the various companies whose balances are made up at this period of the year have not disclosed any very marked evidences of stagnation. For instance, the Bank of New South Wales yesterday gave its shareholders their usual dividend, and managed to add £10,000 to its otherwise large reserve fund, exclusive of the additions made on the premiums on the newly called-up capital. Then the United Insurance Company has come through a fairly favourable period, having given its proprietors the usual dividend, and added something to its reserve funds. Saywell's Tobacco Company has made a very good profit; its report indeed declaring that the results of the past half-year had been more satisfactory than those of any previous term. Want of employment has not reduced smoking, as any one may see who strolls through the crowd which gathers daily in our public places. The ferry companies, indeed, are feeling the pressure of the times, and the North Shore Company has been obliged to slightly reduce its dividend. In this case, however, the revenue has been affected by adverse verdicts in respect of claims for injuries received by passengers. The City Carrying Company has also managed to pay its shareholders a 10 per cent. dividend. The traffic in the streets of the city seems to show very little diminution, and carriers continue to be well paid. Although it is thought that the ocean trading companies cannot be worked at a profit owing to the high wages paid to seamen, the Illawarra Steam Navigation Company has managed to pay its usual dividend. Of course the company is not subjected to the great competition which is no doubt the main cause of the unprofitableness of the intercolonial steamship services; nor is its trade yet materially interfered with by railway communication or any effective land service. Although the Waratah Coal Company has not earned so much money as usual, and has not paid its shareholders a dividend, that is due to the fact that its managers have been spending their resources in opening up recent valuable coal discoveries in their property. The coal trade continues very active. Nearly all the companies now holding their meetings have done fairly well, if not quite so well as in more prosperous times. They have yielded their proprietors about £110,000, which is about the amount of the dividends distributed during the past week or two.

From a statement made in the Legislative Assembly of Victoria, on Thursday, it appears that the Government of that colony are in the habit of cabling to the AGENT-GENERAL at frequent intervals, for publication in the principal newspapers, summaries of the chief events happening in the colony. The fact that they give Reuter's Agency a bonus of £500 per annum for the privilege of sending this information at press rates, indicates that they spend a considerable sum on this method of advertising. The expenditure is a wise one. Until recently the English press did not take much notice of us. Visitors to the old country have repeatedly complained that they have searched all the London papers day after day without discovering a single reference to Australia. The country was completely ignored. The case was different as regards Canada. Frequent information was given concerning that country. The result was that, although Australia is greatly superior to Canada, the latter occupied the premier position in the English mind. During the last year or two a slight change for the better has taken place. An occasional cablegram from Australia is now published in the leading London papers; but it is so short as to be practically worthless. Under the circumstances, the Victorian Government determined to make up for the deficiencies of the conductors of the English press so far as their own colony was concerned, and they deserve credit for so doing. It may be that they are not able to express a definite opinion concerning the result of their experiment in cabling news to the English papers; but it can hardly fail to be beneficial. What Victoria has done this colony should do. There are many reasons for taking such a course. The Colonial and Indian Exhibition has attracted a great deal of attention towards this colony; it is to our interest to keep the feeling alive, and a better method of doing this than by procuring the insertion in a number of journals of an occasional budget of news from the colony could hardly be devised. There is also uneasiness at home with respect to our finances, and that can be removed only by sending pretty full information concerning our affairs. The Government have had it in their minds for some time past to cable a weekly summary of news to England, but they have refrained from taking action in deference to the demand for economy which has been made by the people. It is doubtful, however, whether the principle should be applied to this matter. By imitating the example of the Victorians we should probably attract population and capital to our shores, and increase the confidence of our English creditors in our securities, and it will be admitted that these results would be a good return for our expenditure.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

One of our cable messages this morning states that H.M.S. Nelson is about to be recalled from the Australian station, as she is regarded as too large to be docked on the station. She will probably be replaced by H.M.S. Northampton. The Northampton is a vessel very similar to the Nelson. She is an iron armour-plated ship of 7630 tons, and 6070 h.p., and carries 12 guns. At present she is the flagship on the North American and West Indian station, carrying the flag of Vice-Admiral the Right Hon. the Earl of Clanwilliam.

Sir PATRICK JENNINGS (Premier and Colonial Treasurer) was unable to attend at his office yesterday owing to indisposition.

Mr. G. R. DIBBS (Colonial Secretary), accompanied by Mr. J. Fletcher (Minister for Mines) and Messrs. F. Want, C. Moore (Curator of the Botanic Gardens), and O. Deering, C.E., left Sydney by special tram for Botany at 9.15 yesterday morning. From Botany they crossed in a steam-launch to the proposed site of the noxious trades with a view to finding additional work for the unemployed, and inspecting the land for the purpose of putting a value upon the work to be performed. The party spent several hours in the locality, and this morning the Colonial Secretary expects to complete arrangements with Mr. Deering—who is to supervise the work—as to the method in which operations should be carried out. Mr. Dibbs is of opinion that the ground is so far distant from ordinary habitation and the means of supplying food, that the Government will have to make the necessary provision in this respect at a certain rate, and in the case of the married men, besides the estimated cost of the food, which will be 1s. per day, as a first charge upon the men's earnings, the Colonial Secretary intends to give the wives of these people some other portion of their wages as an advance upon the work they do on the piece system, and in that way it is hoped the present system of administering relief will not only be rendered unnecessary, but the men will be enabled to live upon the proceeds of their own labour.

A new railway time-table for the Great Northern Railway and its branch lines, has been issued, and will come into operation on the 1st proximo. The alterations in the running of the trains are given elsewhere. On the 1st November the extension from Young to Cowra, a distance of 45 miles, will be opened for public traffic. It is proposed to run three trains per week on this extension, namely, on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Sundays.

Mr. EUSTON SQUIER, superintendent of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company, has handed us the following copy of a telegram from the chairman of the Eastern Extension Australasian and China Telegraph Company to Sir Julius Vogel, on the subject of the New Zealand cable rates:—"London, 27th October.—I have received your telegram. Your Government have declined arbitration, notwithstanding their having obtained the sanction of Parliament for the extension of the subsidy for five years. The company have no alternative but to raise the tariff for intercolonial telegrams passing over the New Zealand cable to 10s. per ten (10) words from 1st November, in order to recoup the loss of the subsidy. I stated the whole case to the shareholders at the half-yearly general meeting, held to-day, and they unanimously approved of decision to raise tariff."

It will be seen from our advertising columns that the express train will leave Sydney at 5.15 p.m. to-morrow (Sunday), thus enabling passengers to arrive in Melbourne at 11.16 a.m. on Monday.

The team of English cricketers organised by Shaw and Lillywhite for the Australian tour arrived at Adelaide yesterday from London by the Orient R.M.S. Cuzco. They will commence their opening match on the Adelaide Oval to-day against fifteen of South Australia. The names of the English team are Barlow, Barnes, Flowers, Briggs, Gunn, Bates, Lohmann, Maurice Read, Scotton, Shaw, Sherwin, Shrewsbury, and Lillywhite.

From a supplementary return which has been issued from the Government Printing Office, we learn that the rent paid for the Military Headquarters Office in Phillip-street, which has now been vacated, was £800 per annum. The premises are the property of the Scottish and Australian Investment Company, Limited.

Owing to the representations which have been made to the Government in reference to another threatened riot at Lismore, the police force in that town will be strengthened from the neighbouring towns, and energetic measures are to be taken to prevent any disturbance on Wednesday, the day upon which Miss O'Gorman's lecture is to be delivered. The Colonial Secretary, upon receiving an announcement from the bench of magistrates that the lecture had been postponed, despatched a reply stating that he did not approve of the course adopted, as the delivery of the lecture was perfectly lawful. The magistrates asked that a large police force, and even a portion of the military, should be sent to Lismore; but the Colonial Secretary intimated that the magistrates must rely upon swearing-in of the respectable portion of the residents, irrespective of the opinions that they hold in the matter, and that this would probably be sufficient to ensure the maintenance of law and order. Last night, as will be seen from particulars published in another column, Mr. Dibbs received further telegrams on the subject.

As frequent application is made at the various post-offices in the colony for parcels sent from Great Britain, per parcels post, before they have reached Sydney, we have been desired to draw attention to the fact that these parcels arrive here at least 10 and in some cases even 18 days after the receipt of the letter of advice. The reason of this is that the advice, which is forwarded overland to Brindisi, catches the first steamer from there, and is brought overland from Melbourne to Sydney, whereas the parcels themselves are carried all the way from London to Sydney by steamer.

Yesterday Captain H. Möller and six of the crew of the German three-masted schooner Peter arrived in Sydney by the steamer Golden Gate from Duke of York Island. The Peter was wrecked on Russell Reef, the easternmost part of the Louisiade Group, on August 27, while on a voyage from Hamburg to Finschhaven, New Guinea, with a general cargo, and the master and crew made their way to Meoko, Duke of York Islands in a boat. They lost nearly everything they possessed. The vessel and cargo are said to have been insured in Hamburg.

Yesterday the weather was unusually close and muggy until about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when a thunderstorm passed over the city and considerably reduced the temperature. Generally fine weather was reported from the country districts.

Our special correspondent in London sends us a letter (published in another part of to-day's issue) in which the chief social topics of the moment are briefly reviewed.

The Liquor Traffic of Italy forms the subject of an article appearing in another part of to-day's issue, and in continuation of the series of articles published in these columns having reference to the social and moral aspects of the drink question. The writer states that excessive indulgence in drink is not the vice of Italy, but that, nevertheless, there is an alarming and continual increase in the number of cases of alcoholism treated at the various hospitals. Wine is, naturally, the common drink, but on account of the comparatively heavy duties imposed, beer is gradually coming into use among the working classes. A license or permission from the "political authority" to sell intoxicating drinks is granted annually, but the renewal of the license may be refused in certain cases. The wine-shops are kept open during the hours fixed by the police, who appear to have arbitrary powers in regulating the trade: on Sundays the shops remain open all day. No attempts have been made to introduce habits of temperance among the working classes, and the increase in the number of these shops, and in the amount of drink consumed, goes on unheeded.

In this day's issue will be found an interesting account of the Elgin National Watch Company, which has recently established a branch in this city at Elgin-buildings, Wynyard-square, under the management of Mr. Donald Manson.

In the Supreme Court, in Banco yesterday, before their Honors the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Windeyer, and Mr. Justice Innes, a motion to quash the conviction of Phillip G. Booty for forgery was refused. The Court also declined to set aside the conviction of Jack Henry Reidtman for obtaining money by false pretences. A rule nisi for prohibition was made absolute in the case of J. Scully, who had been convicted by the magistrates at Gosford for breaches of the Licensing Act, their Honors being of opinion that there was no evidence to support the conviction. An appeal against the decision of his Honor Judge Docker at Bathurst, in the matter of Foley v. Sachs, was upheld, and judgment was ordered to be entered for the defendant, who was the appellant. In the matter of Edward Cinnamond, a rule nisi for prohibition, calling upon Mr. Maunsell, S.M., and James William Evans to show cause why a conviction against Cinnamond for an offence under the Sydney Coal Delivery Act should not be set aside, was refused.

In consequence of the changes in the running of the steamers between Sydney and Newcastle, and the trains between Newcastle and Tenterfield, coming into operation on Monday next, it has become necessary to make some important changes of the mail arrangements for the Northern districts. We are therefore requested to state that on and from Monday next all letters, &c., intended for delivery at places situated beyond West Tamworth, on the Northern and North-Western lines, should be posted at the General Post Office, Sydney, not later than 4 p.m. Correspondence for places this side of West Tamworth can be posted at the General Post Office, as at present, up to 9.30 p.m.

The mayors and aldermen of the suburban municipalities and the aldermen of the City Council joined on Wednesday last in giving an excursion down the harbour to the Mayor of Sydney, Mr. John Young. One of the boats of the North Shore Steam Ferry Company was engaged, and an excellent band was provided. The company left the floating jetty in the Bunyan-Bunya at 2.30 p.m., and steamed down to Watson's Bay. Thence the party proceeded to Middle Harbour, below the spit, where the steamer anchored for about an hour and a-half, during which time the young people engaged in dancing. At a luncheon which was served, the toast of "The Queen," "The Mayor and Mayoress," "Municipal Institutions," "The Ladies," and the "Chairman" (Mr. C. J. Byrnes, of Parramatta) were honoured. After a most enjoyable afternoon the party landed at Circular Quay at about 7.30 p.m.

Yesterday the General Synod of the dioceses in Australia and Tasmania resumed its sittings in the Chapter House. After the preliminary business the name of the Bishop of Ballarat was added to the committee appointed on the previous day in connection with the erection of the See of Sydney into an Archbishopric. The appointment was made in the place of Mr. Hawkes, who had resigned. A motion was carried for the appointment of a select committee on the subject of ecclesiastical disabilities. The adjourned debate on the motion for the alteration of Determination II. was concluded, the motion being carried. A motion for the revival of diaconals and sub-orders was initiated and adjourned. The remainder of the sitting was taken up with the discussion of a motion for recommending the authorities of the Church in England to amend the Book of Common Prayer; also of an amendment on the proposition. The debate was adjourned, and the Synod adjourned, at 2.20 minutes to 11 o'clock, until Monday next, at 3 o'clock.

We learn from the Venerable Archdeacon Campbell, Vicar-General of the diocese of Bathurst, that the Rev. Frederick W. Goodwyn, who at present holds an important charge near Sheffield, Yorkshire, has been appointed to the bishopric of Bathurst.

The Rev. John Done, of Kiama, has been appointed to the charge of All Saints, Parramatta, vice Rev. John Blomfield, resigned.

On Monday night last a very crowded meeting was held in the Ragged School, Botany-street, Waterloo, the occasion being the opening of a working men's library by the Hon. Dr. Renwick, Minister for Public Instruction. The library is under the auspices of the Sydney City Mission, and was initiated by the agent of that society in Waterloo, Mr. Main. A very handsome case has been fitted up, and at present about 500 volumes of a very suitable character have been provided. The library will be open to all at the nominal subscription of one shilling per year, the object being to make good and attractive literature accessible to those who have not the means to otherwise obtain it. The Mayor of Waterloo (Mr. G. Anderson) presided at the meeting, and on the platform were several aldermen and other representative gentlemen. A very attractive programme of vocal and instrumental music had been prepared, and, during an interval in the programme, Dr. Renwick formally opened the library, and expressed his pleasure at being present to inaugurate such a praiseworthy movement. He strongly urged upon the working men, and especially the young men of that locality, to avail themselves of the opportunity now afforded them to read for a purpose, and pointed out that, if that were done, the library would prove a great benefit to themselves and to society generally. Mr. Main hopes soon to increase the library to 2000 volumes.

A meeting of the Board of Technical Education was held on Wednesday afternoon, at the offices, 129, Phillip-street. The following members were present:—Mr. H. C. Russell (acting-president), Dr. Belgrave, Mr. W. H. Edmunds, Mr. Jacob Garland, M.L.A., Mr. Travers Jones, M.L.A., Professor Liversidge, Mr. J. N. Oxley, Mr. Norman Selfe, Mr. John Sutherland, M.L.A., and Mr. Justice Windeyer. Amongst the correspondence submitted was a letter from the president, Mr. Edward Combes, at Paris, stating that he would attend the Bordeaux International Congress on Technical Education as the representative of New South Wales, and would probably be in Sydney in January next; and reporting that he had purchased for the use of the art classes under the board some Gothic models made in Paris. The instructor in chemistry submitted the result of an analysis made by him of a sample of sunflower seed forwarded for examination by Mr. F. J. Rutter, Milton. Professor Liversidge and the secretary were requested to draw up a scheme for the board's approval for the usual lecturing tour of the instructor in geology through the metalliferous districts of the colony during the first quarter of next year. A progress report from the technical agencies committee, containing the following recommendations, was submitted and adopted: "1. That the following gentlemen be engaged to deliver popular science lectures in the Technical Hall—Mr. E. E. Wood, on 'The nature of sound,' 'The physical theory of music,' 'Ventilation,' 'Common gas and oil lights,' 'The electric light,' 'The sources of electricity,' and 'Aerial navigation;' and Mr. F. Wright, courses of lectures on pharmacy, materia medica, and the manufacture of perfumery. 2. That the instructor in geology be required to collect geological specimens when on his lecturing tour, to be afterwards distributed by the board to country institutions. 3. That the practice of employers in the engineering and building trades with respect to the tools used by journeymen be adopted in providing appliances for the students in the workshops of the Technical College." Expenditure for sundry class requirements was sanctioned, and the usual monthly accounts were passed for payment on the recommendation of the finance committee. Returns were received of lessons and lectures given in the Technical College and branch technical schools in the suburban and country districts, including a statement showing that there was an average attendance of 227 persons at each of six popular science lectures delivered in the Technical Hall. Other business of a departmental character was transacted, and the meeting then adjourned until 10th November.

Yesterday at 3 p.m. a meeting was held in the office of Mr. Ives, M.L.A., Argyle-street, to take into consideration the proposals of Mr. Charles O'Neill, M.I.C.E., and Mr. F. B. Gipps, C.E., for connecting the North Shore with Sydney by two tunnels—one for road traffic and the other for railway or tramway traffic. On the motion of Mr. M'Mahon (Mayor of Victoria), Mr. Ives took the chair. The chairman explained that the proposed tunnels would begin at the tramway station, Macquarie-street, and descend with a gradient of 1 in 20; then pass at a depth of 50 feet below the bed of the harbour, and emerge near the head of Lavender Bay, with a gradient of 1 in 20, and be continued to Lane Cove-road at Alfred-street. The length of the tunnels would be 1847 yards, or a little over a mile, and the length of the portion under the sea would be 883 yards. The total length of line would be 2500 yards, or about 1½ miles. There would be two tunnels—one for the roadway, 21 feet by 16½ feet, the other, 21 feet by 20 feet, for rail or tramway, and separated by 25 feet of solid rock, the works to be completed in two years. Mr. Charles O'Neill showed the plans and sections, and explained a number of practical details. Mr. M'Mahon supported the project; Mr. W. T. Poole expressed himself as highly satisfied with the scheme, and Mr. T. M. Williamson spoke strongly in favour of it. On the motion of Mr. M'Mahon, it was resolved that a deputation consisting of the chairman (Mr. Ives), Mr. Williamson, M.L.A., Mr. Poole, and the mover, accompanied by the engineers, Messrs. O'Neill and Gipps, should wait upon the Government, with the view of urging the necessity and importance of the project, and ascertain the opinion of the Government upon the scheme. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the proceedings.

The City Improvement Board have announced their decision, reserved at the last meeting, respecting Mr. Harman's appeal against the city building surveyor's action regarding the alignment of the wall connected with the Rose Hotel, Woollomooloo. The board has inspected the premises and heard evidence in the case, and has conveyed its decision to Mr. Sapsford in the following terms, through the secretary:—"The decision in the matter arrived at by the board is as follows:—That the appeal be upheld. The board find, from evidence submitted to them, that that portion of Duke-street adjacent to and at its junction with William-street has not been aligned, and they regret that insufficient power prevents their taking such action as would effect a public improvement in the widening of Duke-street at the part indicated."

A special meeting of the Institute of Architects was held on Thursday afternoon at Foy's-chambers, Bond-street. There were present: Mr. Thomas Rowe, president; Mr. William Martin, vice-president; Messrs. John Smedley, John J. E. Ellis, C. H. Slatyer, H. C. Kent, James M'Donald, and Mr. Fletcher-Watson, secretary. A letter was received from Professor Liversidge in connection with the Australasian Association. Mr. H. M. Robinson, of the firm of Tosh and Robinson, was elected a member of the committee. A long and satisfactory discussion took place respecting the approaching gold and silver medals competition, the drawings for which are to be sent in on Saturday, 27th November next, between the hours of 9 and 1 o'clock. It was also arranged that a conversazione in connection with the Institute should be given at an early date, to be open upon the following days to the public, when probably the medal drawings will be exhibited, together with many articles of artistic importance. Some highly interesting specimens of new foliated transparent glass and also a number of art tiles were introduced to the notice of the members, and it was generally considered that they were of great public utility. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.

The St. Andrew's Young Men's Institute held its annual meeting on Thursday evening at the schoolroom in Pitt-street. An interesting programme of songs, recitations, &c., was successfully carried out, about 150 persons being present.

At a meeting of the committee of the National Protection Association of New South Wales, held at Carlyle-chambers, on Thursday night, it was resolved that the conference of trade and labour organisations should take place on the 16th November. Fifteen trade societies had appointed delegates, and it was resolved that all trade and labour organisations and protection leagues in New South Wales be invited to send delegates to represent those societies at the conference.

On Friday night, 23rd instant, the Sydney City Mission held a midnight "rescue" meeting at the Temperance Hall. The earnest efforts of several male and female workers in the streets induced some 35 girls to accept an invitation to supper in the hall, and during the time they were there a number of ladies attended to the girls, supplying them with refreshments, conversing with them as friends, and advising them as to their future. Mrs. Ardill also gave an excellent address. These efforts were rewarded by nine of the girls going to one or other of the homes provided to meet such cases.

A meeting of the Theatre Preaching Committee was held at the City Mission Rooms on Thursday, and it was reported that services had been held on Sunday evenings during the past three months in the New Masonic Hall, Castlereagh-street. These services, designed to reach the masses who are not in the habit of attending regular places of worship, have been, it was stated, eminently successful. The idea was to render them bright and attractive, whilst carefully avoiding any approach to mere sensationalism. A large number of temperance pledges had been taken, and the great interest the services had evoked was manifested by the attendance of a large, attentive, and constantly increasing congregation. The services have been conducted by the Rev. J. Blanksby and Mr. N. B. Downing, assisted by Messrs. Bowmaker and Hague, city missionaries, together with a number of earnest workers, and an efficient choir under the guidance of Mr. Reeve. In connection with this work, Sunday morning visitation has been undertaken on a large scale at the houses of non-churchgoers, and amongst street loiterers, and frequent open-air services have been held, both morning and evening. The results have demonstrated the necessity for the work, and much encouraged its promoters. Hitherto the whole expense has been borne by five gentlemen. Some time since the promoters offered the conduct of the work to the committee of the Sydney City Mission, at the same time guaranteeing the financial liability for 12 months, and a sub-committee has been appointed to consider and report on the subject to the general committee.

A meeting of the Coal and Wood Trade Society was held last evening at the Protestant Hall, Mr. John Phillips occupying the chair. The principal business transacted was the submitting of rules drawn up by a committee previously appointed for that purpose, to the members of the society. The rules, with a few alterations, were adopted by the meeting. The objects of this organisation are stated to be "to correct abuses and to create a better feeling generally in the trade." The society now numbers 140 members. At the next general meeting the officers of the society will be elected.

From a return showing approximately the industrial skill or proficiency in knowledge of a useful money-earning trade of all male prisoners in the colony, we obtain the following facts:—The number of male prisoners over 20 years of age incarcerated in the gaols of the colony is 1918, and of this number only 509 have a sufficient knowledge of a bona-fide profession, trade, handicraft, or useful money-earning industry requiring training previous to its exercise to justify being classed as proficient. 268 have an imperfect knowledge of such vocations, and the number of prisoners having practically no knowledge of any industry requiring previous technical training to enable it to be exercised in a way to afford a means of livelihood, is about 1148.

The employees of the firm of Messrs. J. T. and J. Toohey, Standard Brewery, last evening tendered to Mr. J. A. Brodie a farewell banquet on the occasion of his retiring from the service of the firm. The chair was occupied by Mr. John Toohey, and the vice-chair by Mr. James Toohey, M.L.A. The toast of the evening was proposed by Mr. Robert St. Clair, manager for the firm, and in doing so he handed to Mr. Brodie a memento of the esteem in which he was held, in the form of a handsome gold pendant, with a stag (the firm's trade mark) in the centre, and bearing a suitable inscription. The toast was heartily received and responded to. "The Health of Messrs. J. T. and J. Toohey and their Employees" followed, and an excellent programme of songs, music, and recitations was then carried out until about 11 o'clock, when the company separated.

On Thursday a musical festival was held in Christ Church, Enmore, in aid of the choir fund. There was a large attendance, and the choruses were well sung, especially "Send out Thy Light," "To Thee, Great Lord," "I will give Thanks," and "Incline Thine Ear to Me," with bass solo, sung with fine effect by Mr. Andrew Fairfax. "I Know that my Redeemer Liveth" and "The Great Master" were rendered by Miss Alice Mountcastle with much success. "Before the Shrine" and "Evening Prayer" ("Eli") were sung by Miss Cowley. Miss Slade sang "Come Ever-smiling Liberty" very sweetly. Mr. Bünermann, from St. Paul's Cathedral, London, gave "O, God, have Mercy," from "St. Paul." Mr. Hugh Duff acted as organist and choirmaster. The Rev. Lintott Taylor, after thanking all who had so kindly assisted, pronounced the benediction, and the festival was then brought to a close.

On Wednesday last the members of the Loyal Fountain of Friendship Lodge of Oddfellows, Parramatta, and the children of the Wesleyan Sunday schools of that town had their annual excursions, both parties of pleasure-seekers proceeding to Manly Beach, but by different boats. A very enjoyable day was spent by all.

On Wednesday last the annual picnic of St. Paul's Sunday and day schools, Redfern, took place. The children, to the number of about 1000, started before 8 a.m., with the Rev. F. B. Boyce and their teachers, for Pearl Bay. During the day several hundred visitors followed. All safely reached home at about 7 p.m., after a very pleasant day's excursion.

The members of the Newsboys' Brigade and Young Workmen's Club spent a very pleasant evening at the Brigade Hall on Thursday, when Mr H. Campbell (Campbell Bros., George-street) exhibited a set of 100 magic lantern views of a "Tour round the world," interspersed with lively music. The entertainment was much appreciated, and the vote of thanks to Mr. Campbell was carried by acclamation.

The annual festival of St. Andrew's Sunday school, Summer Hill, was held on Thursday last. Shortly before 9 o'clock upwards of 400 children, with Mr. J. Tozer, J.P., superintendent, and 32 teachers assembled in the school for a short service, conducted by the incumbent; after which they marched to the railway station, bearing flags and banners, and headed by the Newtown fife and drum band. A special train of 16 carriages then conveyed them, together with about 350 parents and friends, to Ryde, at which place Mrs. Darvall had kindly placed her grounds at their disposal. The children throughout the day were supplied with an abundance of provisions, toys, &c., supplied by the generous contributions of the parishioners, and entertained with all innocent sports and pastimes, the teachers being most indefatigable in their efforts to gratify and amuse them. Amongst the visitors were the Revs. H. H. Britten and D. Rutledge, M.A. At the close of the proceedings hearty cheers were given for Mrs. Darvall, for the Rev. John Vaughan and Mrs. Vaughan, the superintendent and teachers, and the Queen. The party returned safely to Summer Hill about 6.30.

On Tuesday night last a very pleasant gathering took place at the Ragged School, Bay-street, Glebe. Through the efforts of the City Missionary, Mr. Schofield, a free tea was provided for the Ragged School children to the number of 150, and for about the same number of the poor people in the locality. The building was much too small. After tea a public meeting was held, presided over by the Mayor, Mr. T. J. Dunn, who, with Mrs. Dunn, took a great interest in the proceedings. The children, under the care of their teacher, Miss Bowie, and her assistant, behaved very well, and in a programme of songs and recitations, acquitted themselves creditably. Several prizes provided by Mr. Lawson were presented by the Mayor, after which several friends contributed to the pleasure of the evening by songs, &c. The City Mission string band, under Mr. Hodgkinson, with Mr. Law at the harmonium, supplied instrumental music, and short addresses were given by Mr. N. B. Downing and Rev. J. Blanksy.

Messrs. Tresedar and Bartlett, of the Sydney Arcade, had a floral display in their establishment yesterday, which, so far as the city is concerned, was almost a novelty. It consisted of hundreds of lilies of the valley and the broad leaves of the same plant, all of which were in splendid condition, though they had been brought from the distant district of Burwood. The snowy bells, thrown into relief by the deep green of the leaves, were charming to the eye, and persons from England who had admired the modest purity of the flower in that country had all their interest in it rekindled. The lily nestling in one of its leaves is supreme as a buttonhole ornament and Messrs. Treseder and Bartlett had little difficulty in disposing of their stock, so rapid was the demand for it. Sydney, which is famous for the beauty of its flowers, and especially its roses, is in the height of its floral season, but it must be pleasing to horticulturists to know that the lily of the valley and the English primrose may now be added to their collections.

IT is not in the Parliament of New South Wales alone that charges of corruption are freely made. Statements have been frequently made in the House of Commons which reflected seriously on the administration of the War Office. Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, the Minister for War in the Gladstone Government, believing that the charges were groundless, refused to notice them; but Mr. W. H. Smith, the present Minister, being of a more practical turn of mind, took the bull by the horns and challenged the traducers of his department to prove their case. "Show me," said he, "that you have a case for investigation, that you can establish one case against an official, and I will carry the matter through to the bitter end." The leaders of the agitation were not prepared for this course of action, and as a consequence they made a very poor show indeed when called upon to formulate their indictments.

ON the 28th August last a bill for closing all public-houses on polling-days during Parliamentary elections was introduced in the House of Commons. The measure consists of 8 clauses, and the second provides that on the day appointed for the polling in any Parliamentary election all premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors by retail, and which are situated in the constituency in which such election takes place, shall be closed throughout the day. The penalty proposed for selling or exposing for sale any intoxicating liquor on that day is £5 for the first offence, the conviction to be recorded on the license, and for a second offence the license is to be forfeited, and the holder of the licensee disqualified for a period of five years. Power is given to the police to enter licensed premises at all times during the polling-day for the purpose of preventing or detecting any violation of the Act, and if any opposition is offered to the police the offender is rendered liable to a fine of £10. The Act, however, is not to apply to publicans supplying their lodgers with liquor, or in the case of travellers to any railway station.

THE close of the following extract, which is from a recent number of the Graphic, shows how little some of the leaders of English opinion in England know of what goes on in Australia:—"New South Wales (says our contemporary) is anxious to celebrate her centenary of existence with fitting solemnity. January 23, 1888, will be the one hundredth anniversary of Governor Phillip landing in the colony, and the Government proposes to hold a carnival from this date until February 7, the anniversary of the proclamation of the Government. A most elaborate scheme has been laid before Parliament, including exhibitions, reviews (military and naval), religious and commemorative services, the erection of public buildings, the inauguration of a new water supply, and a national park for Sydney, and various fresh railways. Visitors are to be invited from all parts of Great Britain and her dependencies, beginning with the Prince of Wales: while it is further suggested that the British Association should hold their annual meeting at Sydney. Meanwhile the season in the colony is the best known for 16 years. Tasmania is equally fortunate. The present revenue is the largest on record, so that no further taxation is required."

A GERMAN trader named Hermann was killed by the natives of Kapsu, New Ireland, on or about the 20th of September. Captain Stalio, of the Golden Gate, which arrived yesterday from New Britain, brought the news, and states in addition that the natives who informed him of the fact also explained the reasons which had induced the Kapsu men to kill Hermann, but he declined to say what they were.

A MAN named John Pierce, a labourer working at the Government Railway Sheds, Eveleigh, met with a painful accident yesterday morning through being run over by a locomotive. His leg was jammed between the wheels and the rails, and when he was extricated he was found to have received a lacerated wound on the front of the leg, down to the bone. The limb was also much bruised. He was brought by William Harris to the Sydney Hospital, where his injuries were attended by Dr. Fisher.

A PECULIAR case of drowning was brought to light yesterday afternoon. At about 4.30 p.m. a man named John M'Donald saw what appeared to be a dead body floating in the water underneath Victoria Wharf, Darling Harbour. He immediately communicated with the water police, who, proceeding to the spot, brought the object to land. It turned out to be the dead body of a man having the appearance of a sailor. The head was thrust through a hole cut in a sugar-bag, which contained a large stone about 15 pounds in weight, and the body was much decomposed. It was removed to the South Sydney morgue, where Dr. Eichler made an examination, and found that there were no marks of violence on the body, which had apparently been in the water eight or nine days. It was subsequently identified by a man named Charles Nicholls as the body of William Fitz-Henry, formerly residing at 165, Gloucester-street, and a seaman on board the S.S. Illawarra. The deceased left a wife and three children at the address stated, and the widow recognised the body as that of her husband. She stated that she had not seen him for nine days. Whether or not the deceased was of intemperate habits does not appear to be known; but that fact will, doubtless, be elucidated at the inquest, which is to be held at 9 o'clock this morning.

AN elderly man named George Cooper, residing in Terry-street, Surry Hills, was brought to the Sydney Hospital yesterday with his face scorched and disfigured through an explosion of gunpowder. Fortunately his eyesight was unimpaired, and the injuries, though painful, were not of a serious nature. Henry Moorhouse, a wharf labourer, who received a fracture of the thigh through a bale of wool striking him while he was employed stowing wool on the s.s. Yeoman, and George Thims, a wharf labourer, who sustained contusions of the eye, right shoulder, and hip, as the result of falling down the hold of a ship, were also admitted into the Hospital for treatment.

CARDINAL MORAN will proceed to Prospect to-morrow to hold a confirmation service, and on Tuesday he will open a bazaar at the Reservoir Camp.

Afternoon, 3.15 p.m. (special service for the General Synod): Processional hymn, "Rejoice ye pure in heart;" Magnificat, Gadsby, in C; Nunc Dimittis, Gadsby in C; anthem, "Plead Thou my cause, O Lord, with them that strive with me, and fight Thou against them that fight against me" (Mozart).

IN many of the Anglican churches in the city and suburbs the collections to-morrow will be devoted to the Church Society or Home Mission. An advertisement, giving details of the services, states that if the income of the society this year is to be double that of 1883, a sum of £1000 over and above the income of last year will be required.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, FRIDAY.

In the Legislative Assembly to-day, Mr. Miles tabled the plans of the Cooktown to Maytown railway extension. Mr. Lalor asked the Chief Secretary if the Government had any intention of instituting a further search to ascertain the fate of those who sailed from Cairns in the schooner Young Dick. Sir S. Griffith said that a thorough search had been made at all parts of the Barrier Reef where there was any reason to hope that traces of the vessel would be found. The Government did not think any useful purpose would be served by a further search. Mr. Brookes moved that a sum of £750 be granted as compensation to the captain of the ship Rockhampton, which was burned at Normanton through the alleged carelessness of the Customs officer. The Treasurer opposed the motion, and moved an amendment that a sum of 1s. be granted. After a long discussion the amendment was negatived by 23 to 20. Mr. Dickson then said the Government were prepared to offer £500, and he moved that that sum be granted. After further discussion this was also negatived by 21 to 17. Eventually the original motion was carried. The Trades Unions Bill was passed through committee, and the House then adjourned.

THE TEETULPA RUSH.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

SILVERTON, FRIDAY.

Discouraging news still comes from the Teetulpa rush, and every coach arriving here from the railway brings back a good number of disappointed diggers. I left the diggings last Thursday after having spent nearly a week on the field. On arriving there on the 20th there were about 700 people on the ground. Three days afterwards there must have been nearly 2000. After this the number gradually got less as the reaction set in, and on Thursday last there were about 600 less on the field. The main diggings are about 24 miles from Mannahill, in what is known as Brady's Gully, called after the prospector. The gully comprises a small watercourse, and is surrounded by undulating hills covered with saltbush, through which the white quartz, indicating a reef, is conspicuous. The gold found has generally been in the vicinity of the prospectors' claim. It is found mostly on the slate bottom of the creek, which in no place requires more than six feet of sinking, and in many places only a foot or two. The gold is coarse, and that which cannot be seen without washing seems to be very little, as no end of prospects were washed to my knowledge without a colour showing, although in some cases good prospects of coarse gold have been found through washing in the Government cradles now on the field. Provisions on the field are easily procurable, and good drinking water can be obtained from a dam two miles south, likely to last about six weeks, while stock water is obtainable from the station well, two miles in the opposite direction. Coaches leave Mannahill railway station every day, so the best route to the field is via Adelaide, thence by rail. Take it all in all, this rush cannot be considered a success up to the present; in fact, no gold has been found to justify a rush of one quarter of the people. No doubt gold is there, but in payable quantity for very few men only. Many of our best prospectors and old diggers who have visited Teetulpa have returned satisfied that it will not pay them. It is still possible that a good lead may yet be got on to, but if found it will not be near the centre of Brady's Gully, as it is regularly riddled with prospectors' holes already.

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

The Rev. C. Lane, president of the Wesleyan Conference, has received letters from the Rev. A. J. Bogle, who is stationed at the Teetulpa goldfields, dated up to October 27. The Rev. Mr. Bogle says:—"My own opinion is the district will be eventually a payable goldfield for experienced and persevering men, but the majority here have come at least six months too soon. The next heavy rains will probably enable those who may remain here to test the ground opened up in a more thorough and satisfactory manner."

GENERAL SUMMARY.

LONDON, SEPT. 24.

Notwithstanding the continued obstruction of the Irish members, Supply was concluded, 188 permitting the introduction of Mr. Parnell's bill for the relief of tenants on the 20th instant, after a two days' debate, in which the chief speakers were Mr. Parnell, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Morley, the Marquis of Hartington, Mr. Matthews, and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach. A division was taken on Tuesday night, showing a majority of 95 against the measure. The business of the session being complete, the prorogation takes place on the 25th. Various reports are current as to the date at which Parliament will re-assemble. It is believed that the Government intend to summon a fresh session late this year, should the condition of Ireland require the adoption of special measures. The rejection of the Tenants Bill raised a storm of anger among the Nationalists. The United Ireland publishes a violent article, anticipating violent measures on the part of the Government for the purpose of extracting rents from the people. It adds that it only remains for the Irish people to give one final and unmistakable demonstration that this is a policy as impracticable as barbarous and blood-guilty.

Outrages continue to be reported from various parts of the south-west of Ireland. General Buller, having completed his tour in Kerry and Clare, returned to Killarney, where, it is believed, he is elaborating a report to the Government.

Speaking at the opening of the Conservative Club at St. Alban's on the 22nd, Lord Salisbury referred to the unity of the Conservative party, and strongly condemned the obstruction of business by the Irish members. Referring to the land question, he declared that the sole means of securing social order was to multiply the small cultivators of the soil. Such policy could not be carried out at once, but it should always be kept in view. He acknowledged that the defeat of Mr. Parnell's bill was due largely to the support of Lord Hartington and his followers.

In the House of Commons, on the 21st, a petition was presented by Mr. Burt from the members of the Trades and Labour Council of New South Wales, and also from the members of the Federated Seamen's Society and Democratic Alliance, Sydney, against State-aided emigration.

Mr. Baden Powell, writing to the Times, dwells on the importance to the British nation of the Prince of Wales's proposal for an Imperial Institute. Mr. Powell suggests the appointment of an organising committee, really representative of the various interests involved, for determining the scope of the scheme and the working of the details of the Institute. Members should be appointed ad hoc, their functions ceasing when a specific charter and the bylaws are recommended; the committee to be composed of representatives of the various portions of the Empire, the number to be in proportion to the relative comparison of the various colonies and dependencies; the Governments of the colonies selecting their delegates. The cordial co-operation and financial support of the colonies would thus be legitimately justified and secured.

Spofforth, the cricketer, was married yesterday at Breadsall, near Derby, to Miss Phillips Marsh Cadman, daughter of Mr. Joseph Cadman, of Breadsall. Bonnor was best man. There was a large assemblage of villagers and friends, but no other member of the Australian Eleven was present. The village was decorated for the occasion. Spofforth and his wife leave for Australia in a few days.

At a meeting held at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition to-day, under the presidency of Mr. Scott, of South Australia, it was resolved that the closing of the Exhibition at the end of the season would be an Imperial misfortune, and urging the Royal Commission to reopen the Exhibition next year, permitting exhibitors to change their exhibits.

The Bulgarian question remains little altered. The Russian agent objecting to the tone of the reply of the Bulgarian Government to the Russian note, a compromise was arrived at. One objectionable passage was omitted, and the reply was accepted by the Russian agent. In deference to the wishes of Russia, the elections to the Great Assembly have been postponed till the feelings of the people are quieter. The Moscow Gazette demands the nomination of a Russian commissary for Bulgaria, having the powers of dictator.

MINING MATTERS AT NEWCASTLE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.

At a meeting of the miners' delegates, held last evening, a communication was read from the New Lambton lodge secretary, requesting a special delegate meeting to be called, as they were prevented from resuming work. A communication was read from Mr. F. W. Binney, secretary of the Associated Masters, referring to the back shift general agreement, the laying of the pit idle at the Newcastle Company's colliery, &c. The following is the letter:—"Associated Northern Collieries, Sydney, 22nd October, 1886.—Mr. James Curley, miners' general secretary, Hamilton.—Dear Sir,—In further reference to your letter of the 25th September, the receipt of which I acknowledged on the 27th September, I have now to inform you that the colliery managers were under the impression that when the shortened drawing hours came into operation on the 1st July, the eight-hours would apply to all days worked. The Board of Associated Masters however, are not desirous in any way of altering the existing customs. I have, therefore, been instructed to inform the managers of the Associated Collieries that the back Saturday hours are to remain as they were prior to the concession of eight hours' daily work. I am also instructed to write to you in reference to the laying of the Newcastle Company's pit idle in August last. The district agreement providing a means of settlement for all disputes, I am desired to say that this is a direct violation of it, and future cases of the kind will be so dealt with.' It has also been reported to the board that the Lambton miners had refused to work the back shift when there was no work for the front shift. I am instructed to inform you that the coal-owners' representatives look upon the custom of working the back shift when required by the management as one of the oldest and most important, and one which they cannot allow to be abrogated. It is also reported that, in spite of the miners' assurance to the contrary, the pits have not been kept drawing the full eight hours' board. I now give notice that if at any colliery the back shift refuse to work when called upon to do so; or, if at any colliery, the pit is prevented drawing full time by the default of the miners in failing to supply coal; in either case the default will be treated as a breach of the district agreement.—I am, yours truly, F. W. Binney, Secretary." It was resolved that the letter be published along with the minutes, and "that in the event of a reply being received from the masters agreeing to confer with the miners the district officers will meet them."

The New Lambton case was gone into, and after being discussed it was moved—"That in the opinion of this board the miners of the New Lambton Company's pit have been locked out since Thursday, October 21st." This was carried. It was also decided that the New Lambton Company's pit miners be paid from the general Union fund.

The Orient Company's R.M.S. Cuzco, with the inward English mails and files via Suez to September 24, arrived at Adelaide at 10 minutes to 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Sydney portion of her mails should reach here on Tuesday next.

The ship Gretna is to be towed to a discharging berth at Dalton's Wharf to-day.

Yesterday the barque P. C. Peterson was towed from the stream to Pyrmont Bight.

The barque Elisabeth was towed from Pyrmont Bight to a berth at Russell's Wharf yesterday.

The steamer Golden Gate, which has been cruising among the islands during the past eight months, returned to Sydney yesterday morning. She entered the Heads at 3 o'clock and anchored in Watson's Bay until cleared by the port health officer, when she came up to a berth at Alger's Wharf. The steamer has a number of passengers, and a quantity of its island produce as cargo. Captain Stalio, who is still in command, reports that the natives at the different islands touched at, including New Britain, New Ireland, Admiralty and adjacent islands, were quiet so far as the white people was concerned, but they were occasionally quarrelling among themselves as usual. It was reported that a German trader, named Hermann, was killed by the natives at Kapsu, New Ireland, on or about September 20, and sufficient evidence was adduced to show that the report was true. The Golden Gate left Ralume, New Britain, on her return voyage to Sydney on October 15, called at Mooko, Duke of York Island, and embarked Captain Muller and the crew of the wrecked German schooner Peter, and proceeded again same day. Variable winds, fine weather, and very smooth sea prevailed until the 24th instant, at 4 a.m., when a heavy thunderstorm was experienced, and a westerly squall struck the ship. During the remainder of the day the wind blew hard from N.W., accompanied with a heavy sea. After that variable winds, with heavy southerly swell, prevailed to port.

The Gibb steamship Pathan arrived in port yesterday from Japan, Foochow, and Hongkong, with a very large cargo of Eastern produce for this and Melbourne, which she is to discharge at the Grafton wharf, where she was safely berthed shortly after noon. Captain Rowley reports of the voyage that the Pathan left Kobe on September 16, and Nagasaki on the 21st, and had strong northerly gales from the latter port till reaching Foochow on September 24. After loading a quantity of tea she sailed for Hongkong on the 27th, and arrived at that port two days afterwards. The voyage was resumed on the 5th instant at 3 a.m., and the vessel had strong unsteady winds from the westward, with sultry weather and heavy rain, till passing through Basilan straits on the 12th, and fine weather thence to Port Darwin, which was reached at 10 a.m. on the 17th instant. She left again at 3 p.m. on the 18th, called at Thursday Island for a pilot on the 22nd, signalled at Cape Moreton at 5 p.m. on the 25th, and had fine weather right down the coast, with a high southerly swell from Cape Moreton to Newcastle. The Pathan, which has been taken up to load wool at Melbourne and Adelaide for the London market, will probably resume her voyage on Monday evening.

The China Navigation Company's steamship Taiwan, from Hongkong, via ports, with passengers and cargo, entered the Heads early yesterday morning and anchored in Watson's Bay for medical inspection. This was made by the port health officer soon after daylight. There was no sickness on board when the vessel arrived; but as the chief engineer, Mr. Bewley, and one of the Chinese firemen had died from fever during the voyage, the health authorities decided to keep her in quarantine for fumigation purposes. The vessel then hove up her anchor again and proceeded to Spring Cove. It is anticipated that she will be granted pratique at noon to-day, when she will come up to the company's jetty, Smith's Wharf. In addition to 6 saloon and 44 Chinese passengers, besides 5 Europeans in the steerage from Hongkong, the Taiwan has 87 diggers from Port Darwin. She has also a large miscellaneous cargo for this port and Melbourne.

The steamtug Emu is now at Messrs. D. and W. Robertson's works at Blackwattle Bay, being fitted with new and powerful machinery.

The barques Bedfordshire and Scottish Fairy, bound to Valparaiso, via Newcastle, were towed to the latter port last night, the former by the Gamecock and the latter by the Stormcock.

The steamer Duke of Devonshire, from London to Sydney, via Hobart and Melbourne, arrived at the former port at midnight on Thursday. She brings a large miscellaneous cargo for this port, and is consigned to Messrs. Lark, Sons, and Co.

The P. and O. Company's R.M.S. Carthage arrived at Albany from Adelaide at 5.20 p.m. on Thursday, and continued her voyage at 11 p.m. for Colombo.

The P. and O. Company's R.M.S. Tasmania, from London to Sydney, via ports, passed Green Cape at 7.10 p.m. yesterday. She is due here this morning, and will be berthed at the Company's Wharf, Circular Quay, on arrival.

The Atlas Engineering Company's new steamer Woolwich will, it is expected, be ready for a trial trip next week.

The C. and R. R. S. N. Company's steamer Woodburn is now on the slip at Mort's Dock and Engineering Company's works, having the damage made good which she received through going ashore on the Macleay River bar. It has been found that she is very much shaken, and that it will be necessary to re-rivet the bottom, and also renew a considerable number of the plates. The repairs will take about a fortnight to execute.

The departure of the steamer Gunga for Noumea and Fiji has been postponed till to-day. The Gunga has just received an overhaul at the company's works, and is now in first-class order.

The steamer Platypus crossed the Richmond bar at 9.30 a.m. on the 27th instant, and arrived in Sydney at 6 a.m. on the 29th. Experienced light variable winds with head sea to Tacking Point, thence fine weather to arrival. Cargo: 1100 sacks sugar.

The American barque Chasca, which arrived here in a disabled condition on July 21, has been sold to Messrs. Anderson and Barr, and will be used by them as a hulk at the Hawkesbury River, in connection with their contract for the erection of the railway bridge for the Waratah-Homebush railway.

The French despatch boat Loyalty was taken up on to Mort's Dock and Engineering Company's new slip a few days ago, when the machinery connected with the ship was found to work satisfactorily.

The Department of Port and Harbours, Brisbane, have issued a notice to mariners that on and after October 18 the Fairway buoy at the south entrance to Hinchinbrook Channel will be painted black, and placed on the south side of the entrance, taking the place of the outer black buoy. Vessels entering will therefore now pass the fairway buoy on the port hand, and at a distance of half a cable.

The barque Rose M., which entered the Heads at 8 o'clock last night, is from Kiapara, laden with timber. Sailing on the 9th instant, she experienced strong W. and N.W. winds, with dirty weather, till the 27th instant, when Seal Rocks were sighted, and light N.E. and N. winds thence to port. The Rose M. was towed by the Admiral to an anchorage below Garden Island.

The Marine Department, Wellington, have issued a notice to mariners, as follows:—On and after Saturday, the 25th September, 1886, a white light will be exhibited from sunset to sunrise on the west end of the half-tide wall in course of construction on north side of the Grey River inside the entrance. All vessels must pass to the south of the light, which will appear much larger than any of the surrounding lights.

The Engineer of September 10 states that a new company has been formed to run steamers between Liverpool and the Isle of Man. The island is distant about 75 miles from Liverpool, and about equi-distant from England, Ireland, and Scotland, and has, of late years, become one of the most important seaside resorts in the United Kingdom, the passenger traffic having increased to such an extent that there are frequently four or five boats despatched with passengers from Liverpool to the island the same day. The company has arranged a conditional contract for two first-class screw steamers, handsomely fitted and furnished, having triple expansion engines of about 1500 horse power, and to be fitted with bilge keel, which prevents rolling to a great extent. The dimensions will be—length 225 feet, breadth 30 feet, depth 13½ feet, which dimensions and power are largely in excess of the present screw steamers on this station, and the company further intend building a first-class winter or spare boat of smaller dimensions, which will be useful for trips and the conveyance of passengers between the small towns of the island and to Douglas and Ramsay, through bookings with the larger boats being arranged during the summer season. Messrs. Russell and Co., of Port Glasgow and Greenock, are to commence the first steamer on October 1, and she is to be ready for her station by next Easter. As an example of the low prices at which steamers may be had now we may state that the contract price for the large steamers, which are to be built according to Lloyd's highest class, as well as to the Board of Trade requirements, and to steam at 17 to 18 miles an hour, is only £18,500 each, subject to any alteration that may be considered necessary by the directors, and the price of the spare or winter steamer, the plans and specifications of which are now being prepared, will be about £10,000.

The steamer Maitland arrived from Morpeth yesterday with 320 bales wool, 74 bales hay, 28 bundles skins, 132 hides, 175 bags tin ore, 3 horses, 8 cases eggs, 16 cows, 11 calves, 160 pigs, 8 coops poultry, 67 cases biscuits, 8 cases milk, 8 cases jams, 18 bags turnips, 1 cask tallow, 42 sides bacon, 4 cases sundries, 1 bag oysters, 3 cases treacle, 1 case nails, quantity machinery, and sundries.

The four-masted ship Port Jackson was granted pratique yesterday, and came up to Neutral Bay.

The steamer Katoomba cleared Port Phillip Heads at 4.45 p.m. on the 27th instant, and entered Sydney Heads at 8 p.m. on the 29th.

A cablegram states that H.M.S. Nelson is to be recalled to England shortly, "as she is too large to be docked on the station." The Northampton will probably replace her.

The E. and A. Company's steamship Guthrie took her departure for Hongkong yesterday afternoon with a very large general cargo, in addition to 1850 tons coal. In the strongroom there were also 8 boxes gold, valued at £5540.

Owing to the unusually large number of passengers who left yesterday in the P. and O. Company's R.M.S. Massilia for Melbourne, the gathering on the wharf was very numerous, and as it included many ladies, and the weather was bright and fine, the departure was an unusually animated one. The Massilia's list for London and other ports was also well filled for this period of the year; and her cargo comprised wool (2091 bales), tin, copper, meats, &c., besides 11 bars of silver, valued at £3100. The vessel presented her usual trim and taut appearance, but her Lascar crew were scarcely so neat and tidy-looking as they usually are on such occasions, being apparently dressed in their ordinary working clothes. The Massilia was not so punctual in getting away as is customary with the P. and O. boats, it being some time after noon before she hauled off, and she did not clear the Heads until 1.45 p.m.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

THE TURF.

The Spring Meeting of the Victorian Racing Club will commence to-day at Flemington, when there is bound to be a large and fashionable gathering. The day's sport will be honoured with the presence of the Governors of Victoria, New South Wales, South Australia, and Tasmania. The principal events on to-day's programme will be the Melbourne Stakes, the Maribyrnong Plate, and Victorian Derby. Malua having been withdrawn from the first-named race, that event presents a particularly open appearance; but on the recent Caulfield running, the South Australian horse Isonomy must stand in need of a deal of beating, and the only one that is able to serve it out is the veteran Commotion, who, although his leg has filled a little of late, has been going particularly well in his work, and is said to be nearly as good as new. Should the old son of Panic succeed in carrying his colours to the front, the meeting will open pleasantly for the public, with whom the old fellow is deservedly popular. The Maribyrnong Plate is likely to be a duel between the best that the Hon. James White and the Messrs. Cooper can send to the post, and it is highly probable that the battle will be fought out between Miranda and Lava. The Victorian Derby has been proverbially unfortunate for favourites, but the brilliancy shown by Trident at the recent A. J. C. Spring Meeting hardly leaves the question in doubt, and everything indicates that Mr. White will have another "blue ribbon" added to his already satisfactory record. There seems to be an idea abroad that the Hon. James White will try to win with Volcano, but very little need be feared on that score, for although the son of Etra has pace enough for anything, the length of the journey will be pretty well certain to find him out, and taking into consideration the way in which the race for the Caulfield Guineas was run, both Maddelina and First Consul should get home before him; so that even assuming that Mr. White wishes to win with Volcano, it is hard to see how such a state of affairs can be brought about.

All friends of a good sportsman will regret to hear that Mr. Clissold's promising brown filly Lady Lovell got cast in her box on Thursday and severely injured. Her chance of winning the Maribyrnong Plate was considered good before the mishap.

The infirm Trenton will, after all, be sadd'ed up for the Melbourne Cup, and Robertson, who is to pilot him, says he will win.

The small amount of betting done in Sydney during the past couple of days is hardly worthy of mention. The prices are merely a reflex of those ruling in Melbourne. There was a very large crowd opposite Tattersall's last evening waiting for the latest telegrams from Melbourne.

The Canterbury Park Race Club have fixed December 4 to hold a race meeting for trotting horses, ponies, and Galloways, with prizes as under:—£100 for trotting horses in harness or saddle, two miles; £35 for Galloways, 14½ hands and under, seven furlongs; £25 for ponies, 14 hands and under, seven furlongs; £50 for selling race, winner to be sold for £75, 7lb. allowed for each reduction of £25 down to nil, six furlongs.

THE V. R. C. SPRING MEETING.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

There is every appearance of fine weather and a monster attendance to-morrow, and it is anticipated that the course will be in excellent order. Very large fields are likely to start for each event. A great race is sure to take place for the Derby, and Trident should win, but Maddelina and First Consul are in first-class condition, and the filly especially will require a deal of beating. The races open with the Melbourne Stakes, the places in which promise to go to Isonomy, Lord William, Industry and Sheet Anchor, as named. The last named did a great gallop this afternoon. The Maribyrnong Plate is very open. About 20 will start, and the most likely to produce the winner are Miranda, Lava, and Aberdeen. Hexham, Affluence, and Brown and Rose may divide the honours in the Hotham Handicap; and the Nun, Don Giovan, and Myall King look most tempting for the Coburg Stakes.

TRAINING NOTES.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

The tracks presented a very deserted appearance this morning in comparison with yesterday, but there was very little to do, most of the Maribyrnong Plate and Derby candidates having had their finishing touches put upon them, whilst none of the Cup horses will be called upon to do their final strong gallops until Saturday or Sunday. Cantering or ordinary exercise was, in fact, the general run of business from first to last. Trenton and Orator, however, created a diversion, as the New Zealander, going very strongly, completed a round of the tan by himself in 1 minute 51 seconds, the chestnut having been pulled off a hundred yards from the finish. Commotion strode three times round the tan, looking and working as healthy as ever. Trident and Volcano wound up their morning's work with a fast six furlongs, and Isonomy executed a good fast round on the tan, whilst Hexham cantered and spurted by himself. The Agent and Calcola were given useful work inside the course preparatory to Tuesday's Hurdle Race. The Ballarat animals were down for the first time, namely, Sheet Anchor, Britisher, and Game; and Colley, who steered last year's cup hero, led the way on the outer track for mild exercise. Chesham spurted over half a mile, and Lord William, after commencing slowly, bursted home fast, whilst Bravo and Kingfish began and ended in the same way. Huon and St. Ursula galloped half a mile, and The Pencil, piloted by Cracknell, did a five furlongs spin in capital style. Isonomy went round the tan strongly, and Bedouin and Citadel spurted half a mile. This was about the whole of the fast work. The majority of the horses were never moving out of a canter. Sheet Anchor, with Colley up, and Britisher, went a splendid gallop this afternoon at Flemington, round the sand track in 2 minutes 33 seconds, the last mile being done in 1 minute 48 seconds. The following are the latest scratchings:—Melbourne Stakes: Silvermine, Cyclops, Chesham, Trenton. Oaks: Fortune Teller, Bonnie Queen, Queen of the South, Champagne filly, Maid of Honour filly. Mares' Produce Stakes: Damocles. Hotham Handicap: Little John, Silvermine. Selling Race: Orator, Black Diamond. Coburg Stakes: Chesham, Shark, Menotti, Jim Cain, Bonnie Doon. All engagements: Fernandez, Sirocco.

The following horses are left in the Maribyrnong Plate, five furlongs:—Hortense, Bedouin, Mattamus, Essex, Escutcheon, Albert, Loddon, Jebusite, Loyalist, Aberdeen, Huntingtower, Niagara, Perhaps, Mistletoe, Fancy Free, Eckersley, Esperance, Lava, Oceana, Miranda.

The following are left in the Derby:—First Consul, Aglaos, Chesham, Kingfish, Trident, Volcano, Acme, and Maddelina.

THE MELBOURNE BETTING MARKET.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

Although the Victorian Club was crowded to-night the amount of betting done was of a very insignificant character for the eve of the V. R. C. Derby. Trident was still at 5 to 2, a price demanded by the fielders, but there were no backers to lay. Maddelina was firm at 5 to 1 taken and offered, whilst to 100 to 8 found no takers about Volcano. With this the Derby was as dull as can well be imagined. The Maribyrnong Plate was not productive of much business, the few books open being more than ample for the requirements of backers, and the bulk of the wagering will therefore be confined to the post. Lava was decidedly the favourite, and the prices below speak for themselves. As regards the Melbourne Cup, Meteor—about whom an important commission was booked late on Thursday night—advanced rapidly to 10 to 1, and the Hawkesbury Handicap winner is rumoured to have dismissed the question put to him most satisfactorily in private. The only other changes worth quoting are equal prices of 9 to 1 about Isonomy and Ben Bolt, Little John being at a point more. The following are the closing quotations:—Maribyrnong Plate: 3 to 1 v. Lava, taken and offered; 5 to 1 v. Perhaps, taken; 6 to 1 Hortense, offered; 7 to 1 bar three. Derby: 5 to 2 on Trident, taken and offered; 5 to 1 v. Maddelina, taken and offered; 12 to 1 v. Volcano, offered. Melbourne Cup: 5 to 1 v. Trident, offered; 9 to 1 Ben Bolt, taken and offered; 9 to 1 Isonomy, taken and offered; 10 to 1 Meteor, taken and offered, 10 to 1 Little John, taken and offered; 15 to 1 Silvermine, taken and offered; 16 to 1 Hexham, taken and offered; 16 to 1 Arsenal, taken; 20 to 1 Sheet Anchor, taken and offered; 20 to 1 Trenton, offered; 20 to 1 Malua, offered; 25 to 1 Lord William, taken and offered; 25 to 1 Crossfire, taken and offered; 25 to 1 Britisher, offered; 33 to 1 Commotion, offered; 33 to 1 Kingfish, offered; 40 to 1 Cyclops, taken and offered; 40 to 1 Bohemian, offered; 40 to 1 Salvo, offered; 40 to 1 Affluence, offered; 40 to 1 Bravo, offered; 50 to 1 Lancer, offered; 50 to 1 Metal, offered.

CRICKET.

GARDINER CUP.—A meeting of the Warehousemen's Cricket Association was held last night, at the Angel Hotel, for the purpose of drawing the first round of the above contests, which start on the Agricultural Ground on the 6th November. The results of the drawing are as follows:—W. Gardiner and Co. v. A. M'Arthur and Co., C. Newton, Brothers, and Co. v. W. Perry and Co., Enoch Taylor and Co. v. Roberts, Chalmers, and Co., S. Hoffnung and Co. v. Feldheim, Gotthelf, and Co., Briscoe, Drysdale, and Co. v. Ross, Morgan, and Co., Alcock Brothers v. Lassetter and Co., Warne and Reid a bye.

METROPOLITAN CUP.—A meeting of the above is to be held at Rainford's Cambridge Club Hotel on Thursday evening, November 5. All the players competing for the cup are requested to attend. The Pyrmont Ivanhoe and Stanmore Independents Clubs will start their cup match this afternoon on the cup wicket, Moore Park, and as both teams are very strong, this match should be very close.

To-day the Conservatives will be opposed by the Wentworths on the ground of the former. The match is causing a good deal of excitement in cricketing circles.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE v. ROYSTON COLLEGE C.C.—This match took place last Wednesday, on the St. Joseph's College grounds, and resulted in an easy victory for the St. Joseph's boys. The visitors put together 43 runs, to which Walford and Gregory contributed 8 and 6 respectively. The winners did not leave the wickets until 184 runs appeared on the board. Amongst those who scored well were G. Short (caught, 53), J. A. Walsh (bowled, 26), and P. Mullens (bowled, 17). For the losers, M'Mahon and Williamson bowled well; and for the winners Mason secured eight wickets for 13, keeping a good pitch throughout; and Quilty, although not tried till near the close of the game, managed to get two for 2 runs.

The match between the Albert and Warwick Clubs will be resumed to-day on the Association Cricket Ground.

The match for the Cohen Cup, between the Camperdown C. C. and Emerald C. C., will be continued this afternoon on the cup wicket, Moore Park; and, judging from the state of the game at present, ought to be a very close match. The game at present stands:—Camperdown C. C., first innings, 55; Emeralds, first innings, six wickets for 36. The next match for this cup is between the Clyde C. C. and Ormonde C. C.

ATHLETICS.

The Carrington Grounds are gradually approaching towards completion; the enclosure being already fenced with a corrugated iron fence 15ft. high, and the track formed. The terraces of seats, which will afford good accommodation for 600 persons, are almost completed, while the grand stand is almost finished. The latter is built on a new and improved design, and will accommodate about 2000 people. Portions of the stand have been set apart for the committee and the press, and underneath that structure are dressing-rooms, bathrooms, and every convenience for the competitors. The front fence, where the entrance is situated, will be 40ft. high, and have above the centre an Italian tower. The tracks are acknowledged to have been splendidly formed. Four months ago the locality was a perfect swamp. A company has leased the ground for the purpose of making an athletic ground, and already the sum of £5000 has been spent on it. The inaugural event in connection with the ground will be a handicap of 500 guineas. The running will extend over three days, viz., December 18, December 20, and December 24. Entries will be received up to November 20 by the secretary, Mr. C. J. Patison, 99, Elizabeth-street.

AQUATICS.

Competitors contemplating taking part in the forthcoming Balmain Regatta are reminded that the entries close to-night, at Mr. J. Myers', King-street, Sydney, and finally at the Town Hall, Balmain, on Monday evening next. The committee, considering the very short time at their disposal, have been very energetic, and have all their arrangements in a very forward state. In all probability the North German Lloyd's steamer Hohenstaufen will be secured to act as a flagship, and the committee are anxiously awaiting a reply from her captain. An extra race for watermen has been added to the programme; and, for the convenience of the residents of Balmain, a steamer will ply to and from White Horse Point to the flagship free of charge.

The Sydney Amateur Sailing Club open the season next Saturday by starting a Hurry Scurry Race, to be confined to club boats, for which very liberal prizes will be given. To allow members and their friends who are not competing an opportunity of witnessing the race, the committee have decided to charter a steamer to follow the race.

HANDBALL.

It is announced by advertisement that a series of first-class matches have been arranged for this afternoon, at the Rising Sun Court, Elizabeth-street. Price and Conaty v. Nuken and Stykes, and M'Hale and Heagney v. Lockyer and Hall will try conclusions, whilst for the final Keenan, who is in very fair form, will again play Dillon and another ex-champion.

The Broken Hill Times says that the general meeting of the shareholders of the Umberumberka S. L. Mining Company took place in Adelaide on the 27th instant, when the report of the directors, of which the following is an excerpt, was submitted:—"Your directors present balance-sheet to September 30, 1886, duly audited. Plans of the mine have been carefully prepared, and together with the manager's report show that a large amount of work has been done during the past half-year, that the mine is now well opened, and in better working order than it has ever been, and that an increased output of ore may now be looked for. Your directors regret that, owing to the condition of the mine when Mr. C. H. Wilson took charge, the dividends as anticipated have not been regularly paid; but now that the mine is in thorough trim, they have every reason to hope that you will shortly again be receiving dividends. Your directors are now negotiating for the purchase of machinery to treat the second-class ores, of which there are about 3000 tons stacked on the mine. The manager reports that he can raise a large quantity of ore which when dressed will pay well. The store, assay office, blacksmith shop, &c., have been moved, and are now so placed as to be under the immediate supervision of the manager. Since the last general meeting 764 tons 16cwt. 2qr. 12lb. have been raised from the mine, 516 tons 15cwt. have been shipped, 168 tons 17cwt. 1qr. 9lb. are now in Port Adelaide, and 78 tons 18cwt. 1qr. 3lb. are on the road down. The balance-sheet shows that the called-up capital amounts to £7955; the land held is valued at £5523 18s. 6d.; ore shipped and on hand, £11,077 4s. 11d.; machinery, buildings, &c., £3378 0s. 7d.; profit and loss, £1887 11s. 7d.; ore sold during the past six months, £6388 8s. 11d.; general expenditure ditto, £9312 9s. 6d."

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

The Broken Hill South Silver Mine, October 28.—No. 1 shaft sunk 9 feet; total depth, 121 feet. Still in lode. Crosscut extended 3 feet; total, 161 feet. No change. No. 7 shaft: Crosscut extended 2 feet; ground hard. No. 8 shaft: Sunk 6 feet; total depth, 150 feet. Slight improvement in ore."

Surface Hill Gold-crushing Company, Limited, Timbarra, have forwarded 181oz. of gold. Both faces very much improved.

The hon. secretary of the Stock Exchange reports the crushing of the Band and Albion Gold Company, Ballarat, for the last fortnight to be 200 tons stone for a yield of 166oz. gold.

The Lubra Silver-mining Company, No Liability, October 22.—For this week's work the level has been driven a further distance of 3 feet without any change as yet. In the stopes the formation of the lode is still widening out, and the true thin veins running out into a network; no ore being in the lode at present, but we must follow the track.

NEW ZEALAND.

From files of New Zealand papers to hand we make the following extracts:—

A beautiful fish, pronounced by experts to be a Californian salmon, has been accidentally caught in a net in Ingle's Bay.

An area of 127 acres of land at Kirikiriroa has been set apart as a site for an agricultural college and model farm.

Reginald Donkin, at Auckland, an electrical engineer, has deposited specifications of an invention for extracting gold and silver from ore by electricity.

The return of immigration for the month of September shows that 1336 persons arrived in the colony during that month; 853 left the colony during the same period.

T. A. Field has covered 178 miles in a 24 hours' ride on a bicycle, thus beating the New Zealand record by 10 miles. The road chosen was that between Wakapuaka and Belgrove, which is very hilly in some parts.

A deputation from the Dunedin Chamber of Commerce waited on Mr. Larnach to bring under his notice the desirability of establishing a monthly or bi-monthly steam service between Dunedin and the various settlements on the West Coast. The Minister promised to bring the matter before the Postmaster-General. He thought £2000 or so would be spent in establishing the service.

Some of the Rotorua people have placed themselves in communication with the Native Minister (the Hon. J. Ballance), with a view of inducing the Government to take some steps to re-open the Rotorua-Wairoa road, which has been damaged by landslips since the volcanic eruption. In the event of this not being done, it is intended to take tourists by wheeled vehicles to Kaitereira, thence by boat down to Rotokakahi Lake to the junction of the Wairoa road, where the distance to be travelled to Wairoa, to Humphries' Hotel, will be only a mile.

It is understood that Mr. Kerr, who bought the rights of the Hooker gas patent over New Zealand for £5000, has been offered that sum for the Auckland right alone. The patentee has succeeded in attracting favourable attention to his invention from the Government, who have consented to try it at Seacliffe Asylum. A number of private people are beginning to use it here for houses which are not supplied from the gas mains. The apparatus was fitted up during the session at Parliament buildings, and a remarkably good light was produced. The principle is identical with that of the blowpipe, by which gas is diluted with air to a very large extent, and forced through patent burners, curving downwards, with their platinum foil over the aperture pierced with a number of holes, through which the gas issues, and the effect is to produce a brilliant incandescent light, perfectly steady and shadowless. A curious thing is that the burner must be curved downwards, or the light roars loudly. Ordinary coal gas may be employed, but Mr. Hooker got the best effect from gas obtained by simply forcing air through oil, which can be burned at once, without any intermediate process of purification, &c. The inventor estimates that such gas costs about one shilling per thousand feet. Mr. Hooker is now negotiating with the Blenheim corporation to establish works there and light the town, on his system.

JAPAN.

We extract the following items from the Japan Weekly Mail:—

The Russian Minister of Marine, now on a visit to Japan, has been decorated with the first class of the Rising Sun, and of the officers who accompany him one has received the third class of the same order, four have the fourth class, and one the fifth class.

A recent ascent of Fujiyama has disclosed the fact that fiery vapours are now being emitted from fissures in the summit of the mountain in a much greater volume than was the case formerly.

Prince Napoleon, who arrived at Osaka on the 19th instant, visited the castle, arsenal, and mint, afterwards proceeding to Nara. He will remain about a week at Kyoto, and then return to Tokyo overland.

The manufacture of handkerchiefs of hemp grown in Goshu, on an experimental scale only, has turned out to be such a great success that the business will now be engaged in extensively.

Several Japanese gentlemen, who consider that insanitation frequently arises from ignorance, have formed an association for the purpose of delivering lectures in the streets of cities and villages. Mr. Nishimoto, of Kyoto, who immediately received the permission and assistance of the Osaka authorities, commenced the movement in that city.

Mr. Yoshii Tomojiro, a Japanese resident in Germany, has applied to the Government for permission to marry a German lady at Hamburg.

Cholera in Tokyo continues severe. The scene of its worst ravages is now the Kanda district. Two foreign residents of the capital have been attacked.

The standing army of Japan numbers 34,000 rank and file, and the medical staff consists of one surgeon to every hundred men.

The returns of convict labour in Japan show that the prisoners of Kobe Gaol last year turned out more than a 1000 tons of matches.

The tea trade at Kobe has considerably fallen off, and the stock accumulated is quite a million kin, consequently prices are on the decline.

It is stated that a code of new Japanese marriage laws will shortly be promulgated, according to which it will be unlawful for males under 25 years and females under 19 years to contract marriage.

The Japanese Government propose to establish a naval station at the most northern island of the Kuriles, which is close to Kamtchatka.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW OPERA HOUSE.

The production of "As You Like It" at this theatre last evening may be pronounced a complete and artistic triumph for stage manager, scenic artist, and costumier, as well as players. Shakespeare does all that the most pictorial dramatist can do without ever sinking the dramatist in the landscape painter. In his "Marginalia," Hartley Coleridge remarks:—"Nothing can exceed the mastery with which Shakespeare without any obtrusive or undramatic description transports the imagination to the sunny glades and mossy shades of umbrageous Arden." To stage "As You Like It," so that an audience can as in a study in fancy hear the songs of the birds, the belling of the stags, and the bleating of the sheep, and all the thousand sylvan pastoral sounds besides that teem in the printed play, is beyond the range of scenic artist and stage manager. But Mr. W. J. Holloway deserves great credit for the way in which he has mounted the play. The forest home of the exiled duke and his adherents can seldom have been presented more beautifully, the avoidance of all unnecessary change allows the setting of a sylvan glade, where the dramatis personæ can wander "under the shade of melancholy boughs" without exciting ridicule. There is in Théophile Gautier's novel "Mademoiselle de Maupin" a most fascinating account of an amateur performance of "As You Like It," and an especial chapter devoted to the description of the forest scene. The scene which Mr. Holloway uses is such an exact realisation of Gautier's inimitable word picture that we should imagine that it had been suggested by it. The grouping of the supernumeraries and the "ensemble" generally is very artistic. The scene of Oliver's orchard is well painted, and the set of the exterior of the Duke's Palace a lovely piece of mediæval painting. The business of the impromptu picnic, instead of the heavy table so often used in the forest scene, is well thought of and carried out by the company. "As You Like It" is a perfect romance of a forest, and is sacred to love and friendship. The contrivance of the whole is at once simple and skilful. Art and nature are at once one. We are removed just so far out of our customary world as to feel willing to submit to any spell, however strange, without losing any of our sympathies with life's best realities. Its noble and graphic delineations of sequestered nature; its tale of deep devotion and its code of meditative truths; its unselfish affection and its artless simplicity; its heroic friendships and its genuine love; its union, in short, of all that speaks with deepest emphasis of the holier emotions of mysterious humanity invest it with a transcendental purity, a potent and peerless beauty. "It is," says Hazlitt, "the most ideal of any of the author's plays; it is a drama in which the interest arises more out of the sentiments and characters than out of the actions or situations; it is not what is done, but what is said, that claims attention." The shepherds are real homely breeders and tenders of sheep, not puppets tricked out in artificial flowers of speech; the duke and his lords beings of flesh and blood instead of lay figures, mere pegs for platitudes and conceits; while blent with the soft plaints and pleasant ambiguities of the lovers is the sententious satire of Jaques and the courtly fooling of Touchstone. We may say that the acting was all round adequate, no member of the company fell below the average standard of merit, and the rendering of the minor characters was such as to deserve the secondary praise which consists in the escape of blame. To aspire to represent Rosalind is the ambition of every actress of distinction. Less complex than other characters of Shakespeare, a the part demands in the actress certain physical qualifications and endowments that may not be supplied by the most accomplished art. Miss Essie Jenyns in the first place looked the part. Everything about Rosalind should breathe of youth's sweet prime. She possesses a wonderful stage face, with eyes large and lustrous, and capable of great variety and expression. She has also the advantage of her "more than common station," and with her slight well poised figure and contralto voice embodied the saucy lackey to perfection. Rosalind should have as much tenderness as mirth, and in her most petulant raillery there should be a touch of softness—"By this hand it will not hurt a fly." And Miss Jenyns' vivacity never lessens our impression of her sensibility, and she wears her masculine attire without the slightest detriment to her delicacy. Shakespeare did not make the modesty of his women depend on their dress. Rosalind was in truth no "doublet and hose" in her disposition, and Miss Jenyns assumed the airs of the saucy page without throwing off her feminine sweetness, though the woman never peeped out sufficiently to mar her scenes with Orlando. In the crucial scenes in the forest, in the witty encounters with Orlando, Miss Jenyns was delicious; she showed us art of the highest and histrionic resource of the greatest. The coquetry was expressed without too obvious blandishments; the sportiveness and frankness of bearing were never overdone, nor the lapses into womanly embarrassment when she fears that her suppressed passion may be noted, touched with the affectation which suggests the lures of a self-conscious beauty rather than the flutterings shame of a young girl. Up to the present we have dwelt more directly upon Miss Jenyns' excellence in pourtraying the sportive side of Rosalind's character, but she was no less skilful in depicting the other. The first introduction of Rosalind is less striking than interesting—we see her a dependent, almost a captive in the court of her usurping uncle. Her jovial spirits are subdued by her situation and the remembrance of her banished father; her playfulness is under a temporary eclipse. By subtle touches, artistic inflections of voice and despondency of pose, Miss Jenyns conveys all this to the audience, but even then she does not unduly accentuate this subordinate side of the character. The new Rosalind is a Rosalind full of courage. From the very first, when she gives the chain to Orlando, she binds him to her, herself to him, for good and aye

> "Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,
> He never loved that loved not at first sight."

And the audience realised the truth of Christopher Marlowe's aperçu being realised in her case by the facial expression and modulations of voice which accompanied the speech,

> "Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown
> More than your enemies."

Miss Jenyns' Rosalind is an advance in art on her Juliet. It is better than her Parthenia, and the study to produce what appeared so unstudied must have been enormous, but the young actress is roused by success. Miss Jenyns' creation was received throughout with that respectful attention which is worth any amount of noisy applause. She was recalled at the end of each act, and after her delivery of the epilogue received a perfect ovation. Her dresses were most correct and artistic, and taking the performance on its merit it is not only the best thing we have seen this young actress do, but one of the purest pieces of histrionic genius we have seen upon the stage. Mr. Holloway's business in the wrestling scene was a great improvement upon that of many of his predecessors; in his hands the conflict never seemed ridiculous. He is too steady and disciplined an actor to go wrong even in a character that is not too well suited to his style and temperament. The audience understood that he felt the part of Orlando if he did not always look it. The scenes of sarcastic wordy warfare with Jacques were splendidly rendered, and he infused strength into the ensemble of the play. His elocution is admirable, and his aid to Miss Jenyns cannot be over-estimated. The melancholy Jacques of Mr. Richard Stewart was careful, the delivery of such speeches as "The seven ages," and "A fool, a fool, I met a fool in the forest," strained his resources to the uttermost. His make was good, following that adopted by Mr. Herman Vezin, the recognised interpreter of the philosopher who, with Solomon, grieves "for there is no new thing under the sun." Mr. Charles Holloway, as Touchstone, was quaint, his by-play with the clown's staff expressive; he dressed the part correctly, and played with rare discretion. He refrained from the fatal habit of low comedians—exaggeration but there was perhaps a too great self-consciousness of the good things uttered. Mr. Vernon Reid, as Amiens, sang "Blow, blow, thou Winter Wind" and "Under the Greenwood Tree," sweetly, and gave effect to the scene. The Charles the Wrestler of Mr. Everett, who spoke the lines set down by Shakespeare, was discreet and dignified, and Mr. A. Norman, as the Duke living in exile, was a stately personage, who delivered his lively speeches with due emphasis. The part of Adam is always an interesting feature of the representation "As You Like It," because it is recorded by Oldys one of the most trustworthy antiquarians of the last century, that "Adam" was one of the parts played by Shakespeare as a member of the King's company, which acted at and around the Blackfriars first and the Globe Theatre afterwards. The Adam of Mr. Hudson was at best a respectable performance, that was not worthy of its first creator. Miss Alice Deorwyn was a graceful Celia, Miss Marian Morris a pleasant Phœbe, and as Audrey Miss Nita Steele was completely successful in avoiding extravagance, while in the scene with Touchstone and William showing a true perception of drollery and simplicity. In make-up she was picturesquely uncouth, without being ungraceful. The choruses were well sung, the play went without a hitch from the first act to the last, and the performance of "As You Like It" not only reflects great credit on all concerned, but as an exposition of the great dramatist is worthy to take rank among the most lavish London productions, while a more perfect Rosalind than Miss Jenyns it would be hypercritical to desire.

THEATRE ROYAL.

Last evening a very large and fashionable audience attended the theatre to witness "The Sorcerer" and "Trial by Jury." The popularity of Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan's work is in no place more firmly established than in Sydney. "The Sorcerer" has scored quite a great success, and the singing and acting of Miss Alice Barnett, Miss Ida Osborne, Miss Nellie Stewart, and Messrs. Woodfield, Vernon, and Elton, were received with great applause. As an afterpiece "Trial by Jury," one of the earliest and most successful pieces of the now, famous collaborateurs, is played. Miss Ida Osborn as the Plaintiff looked very pretty, and sung the melodious music with sweetness and spirit. Mr. Woodfield as the Defendant, Mr. Vernon as the Judge, and Mr. Benham as the Usher are all excellent. There will be no change at the Royal until Saturday, November 6, when will be revived the celebrated opera bouffe "La Mascotte." In addition to the comic opera company, Miss Maggie Moore will play Bettina, and Mr. Elton King Laurent. Such a cast will finish the comic opera season, which terminates November 20, with éclat.

ROYAL STANDARD THEATRE.

Shakespeare at this theatre secured the usual Friday night audience which Mr. Dampier has created by his weekly revival of one of the great dramatist's plays. "As You Like It" was as well as on the occasion of its first production at this theatre. Miss Dampier's Rosalind has, if anything, improved. Mr. Dampier repeated his good elocutionary rendering of Jacques. Mr. Leston showed once more the true Shakespearian spirit as Touchstone. The Adam of Mr. Stark is an admirable performance, and the general excellence of the company remains the same; while Mr. Larry Foley is still a star. To-night will be revived Messrs. Pettitt and Conquest's most successful melodrama "The Green Lanes of England," after a lapse of many months. There are very few dramas of domestic interest that contain so much dramatic ingenuity and excitement as this early one of Messrs. Pettitt and Conquest, and there are still fewer that contain such an acting part as Margaret Wheatstone. Mr. Dampier will resume the part of Gentleman George, specially written in for him by Julian Thomas, and Miss Dampier will appear for the first time as Margaret Wheatstone.

GAIETY THEATRE.

The Faust Family are every evening making for themselves fresh admirers by their clever clowning and artistic statuary representations. Last night there was at the Gaiety a very good audience, who thoroughly appreciated the programme. Mr. W. Simpson, the pantomimist, from Drury Lane, now does an act in conjunction with the Faust Family, which goes very smoothly, and is quaintly funny. M. Bergin is a remarkably good ballad singer, and the Faust children in their comic singing convulse the house, while Herr von der Mehden delights all who love to hear good music well played. The success of the Faust Family at the Gaiety proves that there is no more lack of appreciation of really good clowning at the present time than existed in bygone days, when the comic scenes of the Harlequinade were the real attractions in a pantomime, instead of being, as is now the case, of altogether minor importance and interest in Christmas productions.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

There was a very fair house to witness the last representation of "Bric-a-Brac." Mr. Harry Rickards and the company received quite a shower of applause for their songs and dances. This evening "Spoons" will be revived, with different songs, fresh artists, and novel dances. Mr. W. B. Cudzow, a tenor, of whose singing report speaks favourably, and Miss Nita Franks will be the two principal new performers. Mr. Harry Rickards will repeat his eight impersonations with new songs descriptive of each character, but he will retain his inimitable sketch of a London Horse Coper. Miss Kate Leete, Miss Juneen, Miss Tracy, Miss Sarony and Mr. Harry Sullivan will again appear in their respective parts. In preparation at the Academy of Music, and under the personal direction of Mr. Harry Richards, is a very clever sketch that is quite new in the colonies, entitled, "On Guard."

PROMENADE CONCERT.

The programme at the Exhibition building this evening should prove a very attractive one. Miss Mountcastle will sing, "Let the bright Seraphim" (with trumpet obligato by Mr. M'Mahon); Miss Cowley will give "Caller Herring," and Mr. Halliwell, "Honour and Arms," from Samson and Waite's "Absent yet present." The trio is to be M'Farren's "Troubadour," with Miss Mountcastle, Miss Cowley, and Mr. Halliwell. The duet, Balfe's "Trust her not." Miss Mountcastle and Miss Cowley. Webb's glee, "Swiftly from the mountains blow;" and Spofforth glee, "Hail, smiling morn," will be given by Mr. Halliwell's glee party. Mons. Kowalski will play Gottschalk's "Grand Tarantelli," accompanied by the Promenade Concert Band; and Mr. Hutchinson, a piccolo solo, also accompanied by the band, which will play in addition Suppe's overture "Light Cavalry;" Auber's overture, "Domino noir," Gungl's waltz, "Les Adieux;" and Kowalski's galop, "Qui m'aime me suivi." The conductor will be Mons. Kowalski, and the accompanist Mr. Rivers Allpress.

The Alhambra had a packed house last evening, the programme giving entire satisfaction to a large audience. On Monday there will be a complete change of bill, Messrs. Fanning, Warner, the Riley Brothers, and Miss Tulloch, Miss Francis, and the sisters Pullen introducing new specialties. The company will also contribute fresh ballads, and the programme will include ministrelsy, olio, and farce.

The Fisk Jubilee Singers will continue their unique and fascinating plantation songs in the suburbs during the week. The arrangements are—to-night, Town Hall, Parramatta; Monday, School of Arts, Ashfield; Tuesday, Baptist Church, Newtown; Wednesday, Baptist Church, Newtown; Thursday, Protestant Hall, Sydney; and Friday, Y. M. C. A. Hall, Sydney.

The Lynch Family of Bellringers will give their most popular entertainment at the Victoria Theatre, Parramatta, this afternoon and evening.

The Cottier Family will, as usual, give their burnt-cork entertainment of minstrelsy, farce, and olio, at the Protestant Hall to-night and Monday.

GOLD AND SILVER.

The following Treasury minute, dated September 6, 1886, on the appointment of a Royal Commission in England to inquire into the recent changes in the relative values of the precious metals, was published recently:—

"The First Lord and the Chancellor of the Exchequer call the attention of the Board to the third report of the Royal Commission upon the Depression of Trade, recommending that a special inquiry into the group of questions which relate to the currency should be set on foot and conducted under an order of reference carefully prepared, so as to include all branches of the subject.

"The necessity for such an enquiry as the commission suggest, is confirmed by the evidence of anxiety widely felt both here and in India; and the First Lord and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, considering that the advice of the distinguished men who constituted the commission is entitled to the utmost consideration, propose to advise her Majesty to issue a Royal Commission of inquiry into the recent changes in the relative values of the precious metals shown by the decrease in the gold price of silver.

"1. It would be the duty of the commission to investigate the causes of these changes, and especially to inquire whether they are due—(1) To the depreciation of silver; or (2) to the appreciation of gold; or (3) to both these causes.

"2. If they should find the changes to be due to the depreciation of silver, they would then inquire whether such depreciation arises from increase of supply or diminution of demand, or from both, and they would endeavour to ascertain the proportions in which these different causes have operated.

"3. If they should find the changes to be due to the appreciation of gold, they would inquire whether the appreciation arises from the diminution of supply or from increase of demand, or from both; and they would endeavour to ascertain the proportions in which these different causes have operated.

"4. Having regard to these different causes and their respective effects, they would next inquire what has been the bearing of the changes in the value of the precious metals on the following matters of practical business:—

"I. India—(a) Upon the remittances of the Government of India. 1. For payments on old or fixed contracts. 2. For payments on new or current contracts—(b) upon the persons in India who have to make remittances home in gold; (c) upon the producers, merchants, and taxpayers of India; (d) upon merchants and manufacturers at home who trade with India.

"II. The United Kingdom—(a) Upon the trade of the United Kingdom with other silver-using countries; (b) upon the foreign trade of the United Kingdom generally; (c) upon the internal trade and industry of the United Kingdom.

"5. If the Commission should come to the conclusion that the aforesaid changes in the values of the precious metals are causing permanent or important evils or inconveniences to any of the interests above referred to, it would be their duty then to inquire whether it is possible to suggest any remedies within the power of the Legislature or the Government, by itself or in concert with other Powers, which would be effectual in removing or palliating the evils or inconveniences thus caused without injustice to other interests, and without causing other evils or inconveniences equally great.

"6. Lastly, if the Commission are of opinion that this is possible, they would state the precise form which such remedies should take, and the manner in which they should be applied.

"My Lords concur, and on learning that it is her Majesty's pleasure to issue the commission, they will give directions for preparation of the necessary documents."

LANGUAGE-MAKING IN FRANCE.—French journalists have been busy adding to the language. The Fisheries brought in for us a new series of terminations, of which the Healtheries, the Colinderies, the Strummeries, and the Black-and-tanneries were all illustrations more or less successful or original. But it is one thing to utilise an inflection, quite another thing to invent a word. The Parisians did it years ago—many years ago—in the days of Schneider, when Offenbach was a young composer, with the word "chic," which became French soon, and indeed has since almost become English. Then followed the words v'lan and pschutt, the latter extending even to the adjective pschutteux—words that were the slang of good society, and meant something like what we should call good form with a fast tendency. These were followed by bécarre, which is still in full swing of use; and now this season brings up another etymological novelty. The new term is copurchic. It must be said of these French terms that they show a great deal of originality in their invention. They are not new forms of old words but are actually new roots. The "copurchic" is a kind of yachting man. The adjective is applied to him and to his clothes. The word is not quite novel. It means the very best style, being compounded of pur and chic, the prefixed co being merely phonetic. White flannel trousers with the ends turned up held by a scarf which covers a belt or girdle, a jacket of dark blue or of striped colours, yellow leather shoes, a straw hat with a ribbon generally tricolour, and understood to show the patriotic tendencies of the wearer—the French carrying the red, white, and blue; the Belgian the red, yellow, and black; the Italian the red, yellow, and green—these vestments are quite novel, extremely fashionable, and très copurchic. The "copurchic" is not very slangy in his talk, rather drawls his phrase, says clever things in a stupid way. Costume and character are both very new to the French, who have, accordingly, a new word for a new thing. But in these columns it may be suggested that "copurchic," however barbarous it may sound, "is English, is English, you know."—Pall Mall Gazette.

LECTURE.

SCIENCE AS A MEANS OF EDUCATION.

On Thursday evening a highly interesting lecture was delivered in the large hall of the School of Arts by Professor Threlfall, of the Sydney University, in connection with the Board of Technical Education. The subject of the lecture was "Science as a means of Education." The Professor, who spoke without any help from manuscript, has a pleasant, graphic, earnest style which interests his auditors and holds their close attention. The chair was taken by Mr. H. C. Russell, who introduced the lecturer.

Professor THRELFALL said that, in considering the matter of education, it appeared to him that the first thing which had to be decided was what was wanted. They should ask themselves, did they desire that our education should tend to improve the race, or did they desire that it should improve the individual members of the race, for it did not necessarily follow that the good of any one specified individual should coincide with the good of the race at large. He thought it would be fair for them to assume that the benefit of the community as a whole might be reckoned to be equal to the sum of the individual benefit which each individual of the community received, and he thought that was the point of view they must take in considering any national system of education. In spending any certain sum of money in education they should endeavour to get the greatest benefit they could for the greatest number of the community. He quoted from Galton on "Hereditary Genius," in which the gradations of intelligence in the human race were dealt with. At present our civilisation is so complex, the demands made upon all of us so numerous, that unless we found some means of increasing the grade of intelligence in the race we must sooner or later give way to other races which had the qualifications we neglected. There were a good many causes which tended to keep the grade of the race down. In this colony, especially, the conditions of life were so easy that there was no reason why lazy people should starve, and that was a great misfortune for the race, since for its full development the conditions required ought to be such that if men would not work they should not eat. This, however, was not the case here. Instead of such people and their offspring gradually disappearing, as they would do were the conditions of life less easy, they not only lived, but married and had families, and their children partook of the same characteristics as their fathers, just as a long-nosed father would in all probability have a long-nosed child. The characteristic of laziness would be handed down just as any other characteristic, and as he had said the conditions of life in Australia were so easy that there was no chance of the lazy people starving—unfortunately. (Hear, hear.) There was another cause likely to influence the grade of our race, and that was our charities. He referred to a paper written by Professor Graham Bell upon "The formation of a new deaf variety of the human race," in which it was pointed out that the institutions for the deaf, dumb, and mute might become the means of establishing deaf, dumb, or mute varieties of human beings. In like manner he implied that our pauper institutions might be the nucleus of a future pauper class of the community. Therefore, before gratifying their natural desire to assist the poor they should consider whether they were doing wisely or not. He believed it quite possible to form a lazy variety of human beings by heredity, just as a deaf variety could be formed. If anything could remedy such a possible catastrophe, it was education, for it would teach men that they were not what they might be, and education properly directed should make that its first object. He would therefore assume that education directed in some way, either as it was now, or in another way, would have an influence upon the race and upon each individual of the race. Now what were our criteria of education—how were we to decide whether a system was good or bad? This had been determined so well by Mr. Herbert Spencer that he would quote the criteria laid down by him:—"We should learn first of all how to order our lives in accordance with the leading kinds of activity which constitute human life—namely, those which direct us to self-preservation; next, those activities by which we secure the necessaries of life, and indirectly minister to self-preservation; thirdly, those which have for their end the rearing and disciplining of offspring; next, the activities involved in the maintenance of the proper, social, and political relations; and finally, those miscellaneous activities which fill up the leisure part of life devoted to the gratification of the taste and feelings. In any system of education, men should never lose sight of the three main objects of education—namely, to enable us to keep alive, to be good citizens, and to do our duty to our children." (Hear, hear.) These he thought should be the objects of education. That being the case they had to consider whether the knowledge now being given by the Government system of education came up to the modern notions of the best way of fulfilling these various requisites, and he hoped he would be able to show, firstly, that the present method did not do so; and, secondly, that there might be a method invented which would do so, and this in spite of the best and ablest men being appointed as directors of the system. He had got a copy of the blue book which gave information with regard to the State instruction, and has found that among the principal qualifications of pupils was a knowledge of grammar. Now he asked did a knowledge of grammar, over which almost the major portion of the children's time was spent, enable them either to keep alive, to be good citizens, or to do well by their children? (Laughter, and "No.") It struck him that it did not. It certainly, he thought, did entirely wrong from a practical point of view. The drudgery a lad went through in learning this abstract science of grammar would not teach him to mind cattle better when he went into the country, help him to earn his livelihood in the city, or do his duty as a citizen. (Hear, hear.) The first thing children ought to be taught was to be good citizens and how to get their livelihood, and the very last of all that they should be taught was that which Spencer specified in his fifth class—viz., those miscellaneous activities which fill up the leisure part of life devoted to the gratification of the taste and feelings. (Hear, hear.) To make the matter worse, it seemed to him they were beginning to teach what they did teach too early in life. Human beings, it must not be forgotten, were a kind of animals, and anyone who had studied the science of embryology would know that all animals went through, in the course of development, exactly the stages of progress which their forefathers or the race had gone through. At one stage of progress a human being had gills, at another it was covered with hair, like a rabbit, at another it had a tail, and so on. So the child had to achieve civilisation through the stages of progress from barbarism just as the races before it had done. Instead of the child being nearer Heaven than the man, the child was, as a matter of fact, considerably nearer the monkey than was the man. There was no question about it, the child was lower than the man. As they would not commence to civilise a negro by teaching him grammar, so they ought to remember that it was taking a liberty with the order of development to try and make a child obtain a knowledge of an abstract science before it had got a concrete knowledge. (Hear, hear.) Our system of education, like many other things, was to a great extent a matter of habit. Men did not teach their children in what they had reasoned out to be the proper way and the proper things they should learn, but out of sheer habit let them follow the usual course simply because their fathers had been so taught themselves in their youth. They should get rid of this idea of habit, and ask themselves on every possible occasion "Can I justify this upon grounds other than habit?" And if they could not do so they should be ready to throw away any preconceived ideas they had as to what was right or wrong. The only ground upon which the modern system of education, with its teaching of grammar, geography, and the like could be justified was on the ground of general culture, and that the mind received a certain intellectual discipline. He admitted it to be so, but maintained this result could be obtained, and children also taught something which would enable them to earn their livelihood, and be of some use to their fellow men. (Hear, hear.) The difficulties which a child ought to be taught to overcome should be natural ones, such as occurred in the course of natural progress, and not artificial ones. He thought, on the whole, that what was generally called "science" was the most useful thing that could be taught to one who had to make his bread and butter in the world. It was surely well that a man should know how to get the most out of the earth, and how to do that was taught by science. It appeared to him that the requisite training of the memory and intellectual vivacity could be obtained by the study of science, and if it put something in men's hands by which to get on in life's journey so much the better, and the more reason why men should learn it. He hoped those present would use their influence to secure for the children of this country a fair chance of learning science where it could only be learned, in the laboratory, and not from books alone. Such a chance was given to the children of Germany and England, why should it not be given to those in New South Wales? How else could we hope to compete against foreign engineers and miners who had been trained to scientific knowledge from childhood up. The time had come when it was necessary for them to obtain some of the facilities enjoyed by the children in other countries, and if anyone were to pay for the ornaments of the mind those who desired them should do so. Having decided on what they wanted, let them then see that they got it. (Hearty applause.)

Mr. Justice WINDEYER moved a vote of thanks to the lecturer. The time, he thought, had come when all thoughtful persons interested in education were beginning to reflect upon our methods of teaching, and ask themselves whether the old-fashioned forms were really the best for our present necessities. He thought the time had come when we should take steps to diffuse a very general scientific knowledge among our children.

The vote was carried with acclamation.

DISTRESS IN LABRADOR AND NEWFOUNDLAND.—The Halifax Herald states that information received from Newfoundland confirms the reports of the utter failure of the Labrador and shore fisheries. The Labrador catch is one-third of the average, and not enough to cover the cost of transport and of the supplies advanced to the fishermen. Sixty-five thousand people, who are dependent on the Labrador fisheries, stretching over 3000 miles of coast, are in actual destitution, and looking to Government aid for salvation from starvation during the coming autumn and winter. It is asserted that the Newfoundland shore fishermen will be almost as destitute as those engaged in Labrador, and, according to a reliable estimate, 100,000 persons will be partially or wholly dependent on Government support during the coming winter. The herring fishery is less than one-tenth of last year's catch. It is feared that the hoax perpetrated in July last relative to the starvation and cannibalism alleged to be prevalent in Labrador may prevent the public from affording assistance in what is declared to be inevitable and genuine distress.—St. James's Gazette.

COMMERCIAL.

THE WOOL TRADE.

Auctions have been held daily since our last report, the quantity offered under the hammer amounting to 7597 bales, and the sales reported, including those by private contract, reaching 6023 bales. The indications of a decline foreshadowed a week ago soon became apparent, and at each sale since held there has been a lack of that spirit in the biddings which was so conspicuous earlier in the season. This feature, chiefly perhaps attributable to the scant demand for speculative account, is likewise, no doubt, due to the unfavourable tenor of the news from Europe moderating the eagerness of the foreign buyers to operate.

Prices have latterly shown considerable irregularity. At times when parcels have happened to have some special character commending them to notice, no decline whatever has been perceptible, whilst the generality of wools are certainly ½d. (and occasionally more) cheaper than at the opening sales.

A notable feature in this season's clip is the large proportion of fine quality wools, soft and kindly to handle, and comparatively free from burr and seed, with a much higher estimated yield of clean scoured than for the past year or two. It is this description which is suitable, and so much sought after, for Continental orders; hence the large proportion of the wools disposed of which is finding its way to the Continent direct.

As yet there are no signs of any demand for the United States, but the reduction of stocks there (partly consequent on shipment of considerable parcels of last season's purchases to London), coupled with a reported improvement in the Boston and New York markets, are facts which may lead to the commencement of buying operations for that quarter at no distant date.

Contrary to anticipations at the commencement of the season, there has been no difficulty whatever experienced in the important matter of labour. All dissensions regarding rates for shearing and the price of stores were settled amicably, and the shearers' unions have not given the slightest trouble.

Scoured wools are seriously feeling the want of competition on English account, and have declined fully 2d. per lb. as compared with the highest rates paid during the past six weeks, and there are still evidences of a further reduction before quotations become settled. Bulky pieces and bellies in the grease are in favour for continental account, and the prices paid for these sorts compare favourably with those obtained for the fleece. Prices current are:—

From London, by mail steamer, we have circulars to 15th September, when the sales had been in progress rather more than a week. At that date prices had for most descriptions been rising day by day, and were 20 to 25 per cent. above July closing rates. The home trade and French buyers were operating freely, and some considerable purchases were being made for Germany and Belgium, whilst for America nothing was doing. Messrs. Willans and Overbury, writing as to supplies for November sales, say:— "As respects the immediate future, it is now evident that supplies in November will be extraordinarily short. Present arrivals and shipments advised show a deficiency as compared with the same date in 1885 of about 20,000 bales, while shearing in New South Wales and South Australia will be so late, on account of the wet season, that only a moderate quantity of the new clip can be reckoned on for the November sales. As in all probability nothing will be carried over, it looks like a total of not more than from 50,000 to 70,000 bales at the utmost, for the final series of the year."

This extract would seem to afford a key to the extraordinary values ruling last series as well as to the weakness cable advices report as being recently evinced in the home market. Whilst buyers were under the impression that only some 50,000 to 70,000 bales could be relied on for November, biddings were animated, and prices reached a high level. Towards the latter part of September, however, and prior to the closing of that series, it was found that owing to so many steamers being placed on the berth the quantity of wool available for November would be much larger than was being anticipated; hence the flatter tone, wired out as ruling for some little time before its termination. Since then reported sailings will have admitted of a tolerably reliable forecast of probable arrivals for November; and as it is now deemed likely that, independently of the Cape, there will be a supply of nearly 120,000 bales from Australia, there is little room for surprise at the reduction of limits, and hints as to the necessity for caution which buyers are said to be freely receiving from the other side. Instead of a short supply for November, the prospect of one for January sales may be regarded as much more likely, as only two or three sailing vessels can by any possibility arrive in time to be included, whilst the steam tonnage that can be counted on outside the regular mail boats is exceedingly limited. In addition to this, it must not be overlooked that the great bulk of what is now being sold in Sydney goes to the continent and the factory direct, and reduces by so much the quantity available for the London saleroom.

PRODUCE MARKET.—FRIDAY.

At Darling Harbour terminus this morning a short supply of forage and a large quantity of wood were submitted. The sales were well attended by the trade. For all classes of forage an active demand was experienced at an advance on late rates. Sales of wood were again characterised by excessive dulness. On the wharfs the usual Friday's arrivals were forward from Northern and Southern rivers and Victoria. Business was entirely confined to lines for immediate requirements. Onions were dearer, but otherwise produce maintained late rates. The following prices were realised at Darling Harbour sales:—

Wood.—Market well supplied, and exhibited no improvement in the demand, which was still languid. Billet, 6s to 10s; bundle, 7s to 12s 6d; foot, 9s to 12s; bakers', 8s to 11s 6d.

Hay.—Small market. Competition for all lots forward was active, and prices were firmer. Oaten, in bundles, 5s 7d to 8s 4d per cwt.; bales, 5s 11d to 7s 7d; lucerne in truss, 5s 7d; wheaten, in bundles, new, 5s 4d to 6s 6d; sheaves, 3s 9d to 6s; lucerne, in truss, and new wheaten sheaves, 5s 10d; new wheaten, in truss and sheaves, 6s 6d.

Straw.—Only two trucks of clean and bright, in bundles, to hand this morning, which realised 4s 1d to 4s 5d per cwt.

Chaff.—Limited supplies, principally of medium qualities, for which there was a moderate demand, whilst prime sold readily. Oaten, in bag, 5s 11d to 6s 10d per cwt.; mixed in bag, 4s 9d to 5s.

On the wharfs the following were the wholesale quotations:—

Maize.—Stocks augmented by a Clarence River arrival last night. Working off slowly at 3s 1d to 3s 3d per bushel. Indifferent lots neglected.

Oats.—No fresh shipments, the bulk of stocks being of medium to inferior sorts of feed, for which the inquiry is still restricted; quoted from 2s 3d. Prime bright samples are salable at 2s 6d to 2s 7d; seed, nominal, to 3s. Respecting the Melbourne market, Mr. Charles W. Derham, under date October 27, writes:—"Oats, as well as other feeding grains, are stationary, for while sellers are endeavouring to play a waiting game, buyers are afflicted with no nervousness as to the future of supply. I quote 2s 8d to 2s 11d for inferior to fair than; 3s to 3s 1d for fair to good Danish, 3s 2d to 3s 4d for good to prime stout."

Barley.—Business in this line is limited. Cape seed, quoted at 3s to 3s 3d per bushel.

Bran.—Not much activity displayed at 12d per bushel.

Pollard.—Inactive at 11½d per bushel.

Hay.—Stocks supplemented by fair shipments from the Hunter River this morning. Prime green lucerne, £4 to £4 10s per ton; other qualities from 40s to 60s.

M'Namara, of Metropolitan Meat Market, reports the sale of bodies of beef at 2d to 3¼d per lb.; mutton, 1¾d to 2d; lambs in carcase, 6s 6d to 9s. The retail prices are—joints of beef, 6d per lb.; joints of mutton, 2¼d to 3½d; veal, 5d to 6d; pork, 8d; corn beef, 4d to 5d.

MELBOURNE WOOL SALES.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

The Australian Mortgage and Agency Company offered 1000 bales wool at auction to-day, and sold 790 bales. Competition was active, and the prices of the last fortnight were maintained. Greasy sold up to 10½d. Round Hill fleece withdrawn, but first pieces sold at 9½d. Crossbreds all sold well; no scoured or washed was offered.

LONDON WOOL AND PRODUCE SALES.

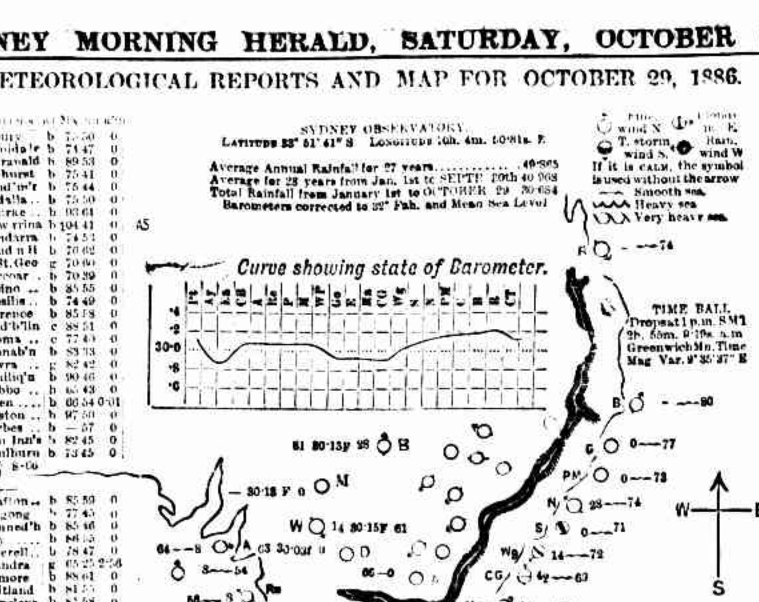

WOOL.—Under date September 15, Messrs. Willans and Overbury report:—Since the opening of the series on the 7th instant, the market has been continuously rising, competition growing keener, and prices of the qualities most in request steadily hardening day by day. Perhaps an exception must be made in the case of lambs' wools, both scoured and in the grease, for which the demand is relatively weak, and it should also be stated that greasy Cape and Natal parcels of medium staple no longer secure the competition of the French and Bradford top makers, but this only means that these wools do not show the extreme advance established on other descriptions, not that they suffer actual neglect. As compared with the closing rates of the July series, Australasian merino qualities, both scoured and in the grease, and really fine crossbreds, must be broadly quoted from 20 per cent. to 25 per cent., crossbreds of medium quality about 20 per cent., and coarse grades about 15 per cent. dearer. On Cape and Natal fleece washed and greasy produce, the advance ranges, according to soundness and length of staple, from 20 to 25 per cent., while on snow whites and country scoured it must be quoted from 25 to 30 per cent. higher. The home trade and the French buyers operate freely. The German spinners show more reserve, but dealers from that country and from Belgium make very considerable purchases in wools of clothing character. For America nothing is doing. The persistency and apparent stability of this remarkable rise in the value of wool, in the absence of any corresponding revival in the general trade of this country or on the continent, afford conclusive evidence that the invisible stocks of the article,—that is, the stocks lying about in the warehouses of combers, spinners, manufacturers and country dealers,—had run down to a very low point, and if, as is not improbable, the extent of these stocks under ordinary circumstances is large, and if their extent is not ascertainable, unexpected and surprising turns in the course of prices must from time to time be looked for. As respects the immediate future, it is now evident that supplies in November will be extraordinarily short. Present arrivals and shipments advised, show a deficiency as compared with the same date in 1885 of about 20,000 bales, while shearing in New South Wales and South Australia will be so late, on account of the wet season, that only a moderate quantity of the new clip can be reckoned on for the November sales. As in all probability nothing will be carried over, it looks like a total of not more than from 50,000 to 70,000 bales at the utmost for the final series of the year.

TALLOW, &c.—Messrs. Anning and Cobb report that at auction, on September 17, 1428 casks Australian tallow were offered, and 525 sold. There was a very poor demand, prices declined 6d per cwt. for all assortments. Mutton, fair to good, 24s to 25s 6d per cwt.; beef, fair to good, 22s to 23s per cwt.

WAUGH'S Baking Powder obtained the only first-class award for highest degree of merit. Waugh's Baking Powder is the best.—A DVT.

NOTES EXPLANATORY OF MAP.

In the list of stations the column headed W.T. gives the state of the weather at 9 a.m., b standing for blue sky; c, detached clouds; d, drizzling rain; f, fog; g, gloomy; h, hazy; m, misty; n, frosty; o, overcast; p, passing showers; r, rain; s, snow; t, thunder; u, threatening. The next column, M'x gives the maximum temperature for previous 24 hours. M'n the corresponding minimum temperature; r'n, the rain for the previous 24 hours. The symbols used in the map are explained on the margin. At each coast station the wind symbol is placed like a vane pointing to the direction from which the wind is coming. A clear circle with it means fine weather; a circle with bar, cloudy weather; and a black spot, raining. Next to this symbol are placed figures denoting the number of miles the wind is moving per hour; next, a symbol showing the state of the sea; and, lastly, figures denoting the shade temperature at 9 a.m. The barometer curve shows the state of barometers round the coast from Perth to Cooktown:—Pt, Perth; Ay, Albany; Ea, Eucla; CB, Cape Borda; A, Adelaide; Re, Robe; P, Portland; M, Melbourne; W P, Wilson's Promontory; Go, Gabo; E, Eden; Ma, Moruya; C G Jervis Bay; Wg, Wollongong; S, Sydney; N, Newcastle; P M, Port Macquarie; C, Clarence River; B, Brisbane; R, Rockhampton; Ct, Cooktown. Inland the state of barometer is given in figures at Albury, Deniliquin, Wentworth, Menindie, Bourke, and Alice Springs. The barometer curve enables one at a glance to trace the depressions, beginning with Western Australia, and passing along eastwards; northerly winds preceding them, and southerly following.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN WALES
about a MARVELLOUS CURE.

LIVING SIX YEARS WITHOUT GOING TO BED.

Mr. Editor,—While spending a few days at the pleasant seaside town of Aberystwith, Cardiganshire, Wales, I heard related what seemed to me either a fabulous story or a marvellous cure.

The story was that a poor sufferer who had not been able to lie down in bed for six long years, given up to die by all the doctors, had been speedily cured by some Patent Medicine. It was related with the more implicit confidence from the circumstance, as was said, that the Vicar of Llanrystyd was familiar with the facts, and could vouch for the truth of the report.

Having a little curiosity to know how such stories grow in travelling, I took the liberty while at the village of Llanrystyd to call upon the Vicar, the Rev. T. Evans, and to inquire about this wonderful cure. Though a total stranger to him, both he and his wife most graciously entertained me in a half-hour's conversation, principally touching the case of Mr. Pugh, in which they seemed to take a deep and sympathetic interest, having been familiar with his sufferings, and now rejoiced in what seemed to them a most remarkable cure.

The Vicar remarked that he presumed his name had been connected with the report from his having mentioned the case to Mr. John Thomas, a chemist of Llanon. He said Mr. Pugh was formerly a resident of their parish, but was now living in the parish of Llanddeinol.

He strongly vouched Mr. William Pugh's character as a respectable farmer, and worthy of credit. I left the venerable Vicar with a livelier sense of the happy relation of a pastor and people, feeling that he was one who truly sympathised with all who are afflicted in mind, body, or estate.

On my return to Aberystwith, I was impressed with a desire to see Mr. Pugh, whose reputation stood so high. His farm is called Pancom-Mawr, signifying "above the dingle," situated near the summit of a smooth round hill, overlooking a beautiful valley, in which is situated the lovely ivy-mantled Church of Llanddeinol. I found Mr. Pugh, apparently about 40 years old, of medium height, rather slight, with a pleasant and intelligent face. I told him I had heard of his great affliction, and of his remarkable and almost miraculous relief, and that I had come to learn from his own lips what there was of truth in the reports.

Mr. Pugh remarked that his neighbours had taken a kindly and sympathetic interest in his case for many years, but of late their interest had been greatly awakened by a happy change in his condition. What you report as having heard abroad, said he, is substantially true, with one exception. I never understood that my case was ever given up as hopeless by any physician. I have been treated by several doctors hereabouts, as good as any in Wales, but unfortunately no prescription of theirs ever wrought the desired relief.

Fifteen years ago, he said, I first became conscious of a sour and deranged stomach and loss of appetite, which the doctors told me was dyspepsia. What food I could hold in my stomach seemed to do me no good, and was often thrown up with pains and retching. This was followed after a time with a hoarseness and a raw soreness of the throat, which the doctors called bronchitis, and I was treated for that, but with little success. Then came shortness of breath and a sense of suffocation, especially at nights, with clammy sweat, and I would have to get out of bed and sometimes open a door or window in winter weather to fill my lungs with the cold air.

About six years ago I became so bad that I could not sleep in bed, but had to take my unquiet rest and dreamy sleep sitting in an armchair. My affliction seemed to be working downward into my bowels as well as upwards into my lungs and throat. In the violent coughing spasms, which grew more frequent, my abdomen would expand and collapse, and at times it would seem that I should suffocate. All this time I was reduced in strength, so that I could perform no hard labour; and my spirits were consequently much depressed.

Early in this last spring I had a still more severe spasmodic attack, and my family and neighbours became alarmed, believing that I certainly I would not survive, when a neighbour, who had some knowledge, or had heard of the medicine, sent to Aberystwith by the driver of the Omnibus Post, some seven miles distant, and fetched a bottle of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup.

This medicine they administered to me according to the directions, when, to their surprise and delight no less than my own, the spasm ceased. I became at ease, and my stomach was calmed. My bowels were moved as by a gentle cathartic, and I felt a sense of quiet comfort all through such as I had not before realised in many years. I could walk around the house and breathe comfortably in a few hours after I had taken the medicine. I have continued to take the medicine daily now for something over two months, and I can lay down and sleep sweetly at nights, and have not since had a recurrence of these terrible spasms and sweatings. I have been so long broken down and reduced in my whole system that I have not tried to perform any very hard outdoor labour, deeming it best to be prudent lest by over-exertion I may do myself injury before my strength is fully restored. I feel that my stomach and bowels have been and are being thoroughly renovated and renewed by the medicine. In fact, I feel like a new man.

I have been much congratulated by my neighbours, especially by the good Vicar of Llanrystyd, who, with his sympathetic wife, have come three miles to shed tears of joy on my recovery.

I bade Mr. Pugh good-bye, happy that even one at least among thousands had found a remedy for an aggravating disease.

Believing this remarkable case of Dyspeptic Asthma should be known to the public, I beg to submit the above facts as they are related to me. F. T. W.

SELDON'S ESTATE, North Shore.—Executors' Sale next SATURDAY. Lithos. Richardson and Wrench.

SALE POSTPONED to 19th NOVEMBER, 1886.

CELEBRATED SHOALHAVEN DISTRICT.

FOR POSITIVE SALE,

The well-known TERRARA ESTATE, containing 796 ACRES 2 ROODS of rich LAND, securely fenced, and subdivided by sheep-proof fencing into various paddocks, more particularly described below.

The other improvements comprise Terrara House with Grounds, Cottages, ranges of Stabling, and other outbuildings.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, Sydney, on FRIDAY, the 19th of NOVEMBER next, at 11 o'clock,

The above choice agricultural and grazing estate, in two lots, as under:—

LOT 1.—TERRARA HOUSE and Grounds, with various improvements. The dwelling is built of brick (cemented) and weatherboards, with verandah in front, side and rear, and contains eight rooms, 3 storerooms, pantry, servants' hall, 2 kitchens, washhouse, and detached from the main building is a brick cottage containing four bedrooms, whilst in the same enclosure is a substantially built dairy with loft over. Adjoining is a brick building, containing at one end accommodation for 6 vehicles, whilst the other end is fitted up as a large meatsafe.

Having been used as a horse-breeding establishment for many years, the stabling on the Estate is very extensive and perfect, comprising very substantially-built ranges of stables, giving in all houseroom for some 67 horses, besides men's sleeping-rooms, harness rooms, blacksmith and carpenters' shops, feed rooms with large storerooms over. Adjoining each range of stabling are stallion yards.

The Orchard is fully planted with various sorts of fruit trees in full bearing, and the vegetable garden being well watered gives at all times a plentiful supply of vegetables, &c.

For Fattening or Dairy Purposes we have no hesitation in saying that the property is superior to anything in New South Wales. It was nearly all laid down in English grasses many years ago, and will always consequently carry and fatten a large number of stock. The water supply is permanent, in all seasons being taken from the well-known Crookhaven Creek, also from several wells.

The paddocks are divided, as previously mentioned, by sheep-proof fencing, as under:—

		a.	r.	p.
1	of	100	—	—
1	of	136	2	3
1	of	176	2	20
1	of	138	—	—
1	of	125	—	—
1	of	120	—	—

About 100 Acres of the above is nicely wooded, affording good shelter for stock.

The opening of the Illawarra Line at an early date will bring this property within a few hours of Sydney, thus affording a ready and safe means of bringing produce to the central market.

Transport is at present carried on by means of a regular steamer from the Greenwell Point and Terrara Wharf, the latter being only 1 mile from the Homestead.

LOT 2.—Containing 18 acres 2 roods of rich land, having an extensive frontage to the Shoalhaven River, recently under a crop of Indian corn.

THE KENT GROVE
VINERY and VEGETABLE GARDEN.

THE FINEST AND MOST LUCRATIVE
MARKET GARDEN
in the
SOUTHERN DISTRICT.

Upwards of £800 has been taken by the proprietor in one year, and in three years over 2100.

THREE MILES FROM GOULBURN,
and a
MILE from NORTH GOULBURN PLATFORM.

A certain competency.

No intending purchaser can fault the improvements and great excellence of the Orchard, which has never been in a higher state of culture than it is at present.

From next month the year's profits and income will commence.

FINLAY and CO., Goulburn, have received instructions from Mr. KADWELL to sell by auction, at their Rooms, Belmore-square, on TUESDAY, 2nd NOVEMBER,
at 11 o'clock,
THE KENT GROVE VINERY
and
MARKET GARDEN,
together with
EIGHTY-NINE ACRES
of
SPLENDID FREEHOLD LAND,

ENTIRELY FENCED IN, ABOUT 14 ACRES OF WHICH FORM THE GARDEN AND ORCHARD.

The Improvements comprise COMFORTABLE COTTAGE containing 6 rooms, slate roof, detached kitchen, coachhouse and stables, underground tank; also three 4-roomed brick and stone Cottages for men's use, with apple and fruit sheds, and every convenience for an orchard of its kind.
There are about 1000 of the choicest varieties of apples and stone fruits in full bearing, and a large source of revenue is also derived from the sale of vegetables and young trees.
The proprietor has earned a competency, and sells simply on account of advancing years and a desire for perfect retirement.
No one can form an estimate of the great excellence of this investment, and the proprietor simply asks for an inspection of the property. He is prepared to show his returns; and from the great source of revenue derivable from the gardens, moderately good seasons, under competent management, the whole purchase can be cleared off in three or four years. The great area of good land available for an extension of the orchard, and the ready market for all that can be produced, suggest in time the great and increasing value of the Kent Grove Orchard.

TERMS.—£400 deposit, £400 on execution of conveyance; the balance may remain for five years at 7 per cent.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 5.

At Bungendore, Lake George.

By order and on account of the Administratrix of the Estate and Effects of Henry George Powell, deceased.

EXCEEDINGLY VALUABLE AND BEAUTIFUL
HOMESTEAD PROPERTY, known as WERRIWA,

4½ miles from Lake George, and a similar distance from the Bungendore Railway Station.

One of the most BEAUTIFUL PASTORAL PROPERTIES
in that favourite district, and adjoining the Princely Estates,
CURRENDOOLEY and JANEFIELD, of Messrs. Osborne and Rutledge, comprising an area of 7521 acres 3 roods and 3 perches.

THUS COMPOSED:
3519 acres 3 roods and 3 perches Freehold,
2052 Conditional Purchase,
and
1950 acres Crown Lands.

All conditions and covenants of C.P.'s complied with.
Together with
4000 Well-fleeced Sheep, nearly all fattening ages.
20 head Horses.
86 head splendid Dairy Cattle.

The whole property, together with stock, will be submitted and sold in one lot.

FINLAY and CO. have received instructions to sell by auction, at Bungendore, at Chapman's Hotel, on FRIDAY, 5th November, at 11 o'clock.
Werriwa is situated on a lovely piece of table land, and commands one of the most picturesque and enchanting views of Lake George and the surrounding western slopes of the Gourock Range.

The improvements comprise a neat and comfortable Verandah Cottage, built of stone, together with dining-room, hall, and six other convenient sized rooms, cellar, stables, buggy shed, and servant's room, also men's huts, woolshed, yards, and other improvements. The whole property is fenced in sheep proof, and subdivided into 12 paddocks, including cultivation and excellent hay crop.

Werriwa is abundantly watered with creeks and springs, and has never been dry; the soil is principally limestone, and is one of the soundest and best fattening properties in the district; upwards of 3000 fat wethers have been turned off during the last few months, and realised the highest price in the Sydney market, and this in an extremely dry season.

The capabilities are quite equal to 6000 sheep and 100 head of cattle. The stock on Werriwa at present, which will be sold with the estate, are of a first-class character, nearly all being 6-tooth, and fattening wethers in full fleece, the wool of which last year, in a bad market, brought 8d per lb. The cattle are principally a grown dairy herd, with about 20 useful horses.

The Auctioneers would strongly urge upon those desirous of securing a profitable, highly-improved, and perfect homestead property to inspect Werriwa. It is surrounded by valuable and princely properties, the scenery and climate are simply perfection, and a more healthy, bracing, and invigorating spot is not to be found in the colony. The village close by, which has every mark of refinement and civilisation, "first-class hotels, churches, schools, mills, and chapel," is much frequented by pleasure-seekers, the abundance of fish, fowl, and game of all sorts forming no mean attraction; while its proximity to market, 3 hours from Goulburn, and 8 from Sydney, by rail, renders it, in a marketable point of view, immensely valuable as a source of income, the highest prices being always obtainable for stock taken at the paddocks.

Intending purchasers may view the place at any time by giving notice to Mr. N. Powell, Turralla, Bungendore.

Trains leaving Sydney at 9 p.m. reach Bungendore the following morning at 5.30, returning the same day. Distance by train from Sydney, 173 miles; and 36 from Goulburn.

TERMS.
One-third cash, and the balance at 1, 2, and 3 years, with 6 per cent. interest added, payable half-yearly.

MORTLAKE! MORTLAKE!

THE RISING SUBURB.

RIVER VIEW ESTATE,
AT THE NEW GASWORKS.

THIS IS THE FINEST SUBDIVISION YET OFFERED.

About 300 Yards from the NEW GASWORKS, where a great number of men are permanently employed.

High Land, splendid Views of all the Western Suburbs, also the Parramatta River Champion Course, and Wide Street, from 2 chains, none less than 1 chain wide.

A Back Entrance to every Allotment.

Church and School now being erected.

This valuable Estate, consisting of 82 acres, is situate about half a mile from the Concord Railway Platform.
About a quarter mile from steamers' wharf
About half-mile from Correy's Garden
About half-mile from Cabarita Wharf, and within 300 yards of the Gas Company's new works, where 1000 men are permanently employed.

Arrangements are being completed for the establishment of a TWEED FACTORY, which, together with the NEW HOSPITAL given by the late Thomas Walker, Esq., must make this the most progressive suburb of Sydney.

Remember!—This is not a wilderness; it is a fast-rising suburb, gas and water being laid on. Communication by both steamer and rail.
For working men it is a chance seldom met with, as you can build on the Company's liberal terms, and are sure of constant work.
For speculators it should not be lost sight of that you are sure to double your money before a month, because it is well known that all the buyers at the last sale at the new Gasworks have since realised from 50 to 300 per cent. profit.
Land that was then bought at £2 10s has been since sold for £10 per foot.
Land is the best speculation in the colony, if you buy in the right place, and that place now is MORTLAKE.
And the terms are so remarkably easy that anyone can secure a HOME at a trifling outlay, as the Company give liberal assistance to build.
One Allotment will be given away amongst the purchasers of three Allotments.

TITLE PERFECT.

BRUNKER and WOLFE have received instructions from G. N. Russell, Esq., to sell by auction, at Main's Hotel, West Maitland, on SATURDAY, 6th NOVEMBER, 1886,
The FAMOUS STRATHISLA ESTATE, containing 2560 acres (more or less) of first-class grazing land, a large area of which is sapped, substantially fenced, and having extensive frontage to the Paterson River, is bountifully and permanently watered.

The position and capacities of STRATHISLA entitle it to more than an ordinary share of attention.

It is worthy of note that during the late protracted drought grazing estates in the Williams and Paterson districts have contributed a large proportion of the supply of fat cattle sold in the Maitland market, and with careful management and ordinary attention such properties as STRATHISLA cannot fail to yield remunerative returns, and its purchase must prove a permanently sound investment.

BOYD and KING,
at 3 p.m.

The Auctioneers desire to call the attention of the public to this charmingly situated property, forming perhaps one of the MOST DESIRABLE LOCATIONS
for family residence, away from the objections of town life, and while embracing all the favourable features of salubrity and health, commands
PICTURESQUE VIEWS, and is surrounded by
SUBSTANTIAL BIJOU RESIDENCES
of city men, who find Hurstville preferable to any suburb within the same distance of town, and the travelling conveniences superior to those on other lines.

So many persons living in rented houses are beginning to realise the fallacy of paying rent to enrich landlords and impoverish their own families, that it will be a message of
when announced that this estate,
WHICH IS JUSTLY NAMED
the
ELYSIAN SUBURB, is
BEING PLACED in the MARKET by
THE AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL INVESTMENT and BUILDING COMPANY, Limited; especially when intending buyers realise the fact that by purchasing this land they acquire a beneficial
INTEREST IN THE COMPANY'S PROFITS, thus, while investing spare capital, further and above the LARGE PROFIT
that must accrue on the investment, they are laying up a store in the shape of profits from the Company;
and to those
WISHING TO BUILD, liberal and immediate assistance is given, so that no delay need occur between the time of buying the land and entering into a possession of a CHARMING VILLA FREEHOLD.

Every penny paid off,
which means a nest-egg for the family.

NOTE THE TERMS:
per £5 Lot,
deposit, and the balance extending over eight years, at 6 per cent. interest, or, if the purchase money is paid off in one year,
NO INTEREST IS CHARGED.

NOTE:

"The little smiling cottage, warm, embower'd,
The little smiling cottage, where at eve
He meets his rosy children at the door,
Prattling their welcomes; and his honest wife,
With good brown cake and bacon slice, intent
To cheer his hunger after labours hard."

PAUL PRY ON THE WAR PATH.

It must not be supposed for one moment that the name given to me, the subject of this sketch, is one that was bestowed at the baptismal font, the registry-office, or at any other establishment for branding little boys and girls with distinguishing appellations. My name is neither Paul nor Pry, but my irrepressible curiosity about everything, and my somewhat inconvenient regard for other people's affairs, has caused me not to be known by my proper name, but by one that speaks with peculiar force of my abominable propensities. I'm at it all day long, and when decent people are wrapped in the arms of Morpheus I am frequently engaged in all kinds of prying expeditions. It is true I am useful in my way, for my inquisitorial proceedings sometimes lead me to find out things which are best brought to light; and as I possess a considerable fund of dry humour, and am good at a joke, generally at somebody else's expense, I am a source of amusement to many. I do not now propose to relate any of my more extraordinary adventures, but in an openhanded and candid way to tell the result of my observations on people generally. I want a good point for a look-out. I want a place and a time where people's peculiarities come out in bold relief; where their wits are at full spring, and when they are imbued with the fixed intent of doing a good turn for themselves. Cursorily I strolled the other day into

and it at once struck me in a way that was absolutely convincing, that of all other places this was the one in which to make my first trial of decent observation as opposed to my usual occupation of indecent prying into other people's affairs. What a crowd of people there was, to be sure! and no wonder, for the newspapers and the big posters on the wall tell me that Everything is being sold at ENGLISH COST PRICE.

What a medley of curious secrets there must be in that collected combination of humanity! How I longed to pry into that man's affairs and into that lady's intentions. Where is the stout middle-aged matron going to? What does the elegant lady in delicate summer garb do there? Who is that unexceptionable swell, who looks as if he had just stepped out of a Bond-street milliner's bandbox? Why is dainty Miss in the pretty muslin frock there? and comfortable mama with her troop of little ones, looking as pleased as a Turk with an extra dispensation of wives, or a lazy member of Parliament who has just stepped into a snug sinecure? Who are they, and what do they there? "Aye; there's the rub," say I. These I describe are only a few of the many types of people that I saw moving about in the crowded showrooms and busy departments. There are scores of others; there are people from east, west, north, and south, as I, with my prying experiences, can easily discover from the cut of their clothes, or the set of their hats, or the words they utter, and the way they individually or collectively go about their business. I suppose it's the ENGLISH COST PRICE business that makes them all look so pleased. I felt inclined to ask one or two of them all about it, and would have given worlds to have looked into that bag or that basket; but then the thought occurred to me that possibly I might get my nose pulled or my pleasing features damaged, or suffer some other equally unpleasant punishment for prying into what didn't concern me, so I determined to confine myself to decent observation only, and, by the living jingo! I found plenty to do. Yes, there's not a doubt about it; it's the ENGLISH COST PRICE business that does it; and when I come to bring a little simple arithmetic to bear upon the question, it seems to me that my lively-looking neighbours for the nonce had plenty of reason for assuming joyous faces and for making fair weather of it. You know there's a wondrous difference between ENGLISH COST PRICE and regular Sydney selling rates. There's the freight out, and the charges, and all kinds of things to which we faraway colonists have to contribute in the regular order of things; and then there's that much-debated AD VALOREM duty of which I hear so much. Of course that's knocked off to bring the goods down to ENGLISH COST PRICE, and altogether it seems to me as far as decent observation enables me to see, to be a decidedly good idea, and no wonder the ladies and the gentlemen, the youths and the HOBBLEDEHOYS, the boys and the girls, and the people generally flock to the Haymarket in such thousands to take advantage of it. I myself reduced my stock of ready money and went in for a few things on the basis of ENGLISH COST PRICE. Let me see, there was a Summer Suit and a couple of pairs of Boots, then there was a dandy Umbrella and three pretty Neckties; there was a SILK HAT for go-to-meeting wear, and a WATERPROOF for wet weather; there was a PORTMANTEAU for the next prying expedition to Melbourne; and a most deliciously comfortable ARMCHAIR for verandah use. There was a nice little TODDY KETTLE, a pair of OPERA GLASSES, a Smoking Cap, and a useful Penknife, and when I came to calculate the total, I said,

PAUL, YOU HAVE SAVED A FIVER, and went home to bed, to sleep that sleep which innocence only knows.

TO ECONOMICAL HOUSEWIVES.—Your grocer can purchase inferior Soaps 8s a hundredweight less than he can buy Allen's No. 1 Crown Soap, and he charges for them the same price per bar. He reaps the benefit, and you pay for it. You lose 8s per box, your clothes last no time, and their colours are destroyed by the adulteration. To avoid all this, see that your bar of soap is stamped "ALLEN'S No. 1 Crown."
